LIBRARY
SUPREME COURT, U. S.

Office-Supreme Court, U.S.
FILED
NOV 29 1963
JOHN F. DAVIS, CLERK

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States

October Term, 1963
No. 645

Case No. 17235

PENSICK & GORDON, INC., Petitioner,

vs.

CALIFORNIA MOTOR EXPRESS, et al., Respondent.

Case No. 17380

PENSICK & GORDON, INC., a California corporation, Petitioner,

vs.

CALIFORNIA MOTOR EXPRESS, LIMITED, a corporation, et al., Respondent.

Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

HILL, FARRER & BURRILL,
By CARL M. GOULD,
411 West Fifth Street,
Los Angeles 13, California,
Attorneys for Petitioner.

Parker & Son, Inc., Law Printers, Los Angeles. Phone MA. 6-9171.

SUBJECT INDEX

	Page
Opinions below	2
Grounds for jurisdiction	3
Questions presented	3
Statutes involved	6
Statement of the case	7
Argument for allowance of writ	12
(1) The decision of the Court of Appeals on remand conflicts with decisions of Courts of Appeals in different circuits as well as with decisions of Federal District Courts in other circuits on the same matter	14
(2) The opinion of the Court of Appeals on remand constitutes a misapplication of decisions of this court	15
(3) The opinion of the Court of Appeals on remand has decided important questions of federal law which have not been, but should be, settled by this court	17
Conclusion	22

INDEX TO APPENDICES

Appendix A. Opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit	1
Appendix B. Opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States	7
Appendix C. Opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States	8
Appendix D. Opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit	19

Opinions Below.

The opinion of District Judge Byrne dismissing the complaint in No. 17235[1] for lack of jurisdiction is unreported but appears in the printed transcript of the record of the appeal in said cause [1 Tr. 94].[2] Judge Byrne rendered no opinion in support of his order dismissing the first amended complaint (the second cause); the court's order in this respect appears in the printed transcript of record of the second appeal [2 Tr. 194]; the transcript of the oral argument which preceded this order, however, does give some indication of the court's thinking in this respect [2 Tr. 210-279, at pp. 248-254, 258-261, 264-266, 275-279].

The first opinion of the Court of Appeals in these causes is reported in 302 F. 2d, at 391 (April 1962), and is attached hereto as Appendix "A".

Following, this court granted certiorari in the causes, vacated the judgment and remanded for further consideration in the light of its opinion in Hewitt-Robins v. Eastern Freight-Ways, Inc. [(1962) 371 U. S. 84], (1962) 371 U. S. 184, 9 L. Ed. 2d 227. This opinion is attached hereto as Appendix "B".

This court's opinion in Hewitt-Robins, supra, is attached hereto as Appendix "C".

---

[1]Where necessary to distinguish for clarity, the cause and appeal in No. 17235 will be referred to as the "First Cause" and "First Appeal" and those in No. 17380 will be referred to as the "Second Cause" and "Second Appeal," respectively.

[2]Page references to the printed transcript of record in the "First Appeal" will be preceded by the designation "1 Tr."; that in the "Second Appeal," "2 Tr." These printed transcripts have been forwarded by the Clerk of the Court of Appeals in accordance with Rule 21(4).

The decision of the Court of Appeals on remand is as yet unreported, but is printed and attached hereto as Appendix "D".

Grounds for Jurisdiction.

The District Court, pursuant to appropriate motions, dismissed the complaint in the first cause [1 Tr. 94] and the first amended complaint in the second cause [2 Tr. 194] for want of jurisdiction in each instance; The Court of Appeals, in its first opinion, affirmed these orders. This latter judgment was subsequently vacated by this court and the causes remanded for further consideration. The original orders of the District Court are affirmed in part and reversed in part by the opinion and judgment of the Court of Appeals on remand. Review of the latter judgment by this court is, accordingly, sought under 28 U. S. C. A., §1254(1).

The judgment of the Court of Appeals on remand is dated 18 September, 1963 and was filed and entered the same date; no rehearing was sought or granted, nor has any order been sought by or granted to this petitioner for an extension of time within which to petition for certiorari.

Questions Presented.

As pointed out in the first petition herein, these causes ultimately involve two questions of major importance to the transportation industry and those sectors of the business community which depend upon service from interstate motor common carriers: first, are federally certificated motor common carriers immune to damage suits by shippers? second, if shippers do, in fact, still retain private rights of action against such carriers for breach of the duty to serve, are those rights barred or affected by the existence of a peaceful picket line at the shipper's place of business?

The Court of Appeals on remand held that the right of action for breach of the common law duty to render service survived the passage of the Motor Carrier Act (Interstate Commerce Act, Part II) and was thus preserved to shippers, but that no statutory right of action arises through breach of the same duty as enunciated in Sections 216(b) and (d) of the Motor Carrier Act. [49 U. S. C. A. §316 (b) and (d)]. Accordingly, the court concluded, the Federal Courts have jurisdiction of a shipper's common law cause of action for damages in a diversity situation and this jurisdiction is not pre-empted or barred because the breach of duty was occasioned by a picket line at the shipper's place of business; absent such diversity, on the other hand, there is no other basis for jurisdiction.

This decision resolved the general questions set forth above in part only and left other aspects thereof still in need of final determination.

The immediate questions specifically presented, therefore, are the following:

(1) Does a private shipper have the right to seek and obtain redress from motor common carriers for loss or damage suffered as a consequence of the carriers' breach of the duty to render service under the statutory sanctions of the Motor Carrier Act, Sections 216(b) and (d)?

(2) Assuming the existence of such a shipper's right of action, do the Federal Courts have jurisdiction thereof as an action arising under an Act of Congress regulating commerce?

(3) Conversely stated, the foregoing questions may be summarized as follows: Did Congress intend by the Motor Carrier Act that no rights should flow to shippers from the statutory duty to render service imposed by it upon motor common carriers and, at the same time, intend that shippers should continue to enjoy the rights flowing from the common law counterpart of that same duty?

(4) In view of the important Federal policy and statutory considerations attaching to and arising from such common law damage actions, as indicated in the court's opinion on remand, do not the Federal Courts have jurisdiction thereof under 28 U. S. C. A., Sec. 1331, independent of the existence of diversity of citizenship?

(5) If the Federal Courts' jurisdiction to hear and determine such a cause is not barred or preempted because of the fact that the breach of duty was occasioned in part by the existence of a peaceful picket line at the shipper's place of business, is such jurisdiction or the cause of action otherwise affected or modified as a consequence of this fact?

Statutes Involved.

Interstate Commerce Act, Part II (Motor Carrier Act) Section 216(b), (d) and (j) [49 U. S. C. A., Sec. 316(b), (d) and (j)].

"§316. RATES, FARES AND CHARGES—

. . .

"RATES, FACILITIES FOR CARRIERS OF PROPERTY

"(b) It shall be the duty of every common carrier of property by motor vehicle to provide safe and adequate service, equipment, and facilities for the transportation of property in interstate or foreign commerce; to establish, observe, and enforce just and reasonable rates, charges, and classifications, and just and reasonable regulations and practices relating thereto and to the manner and method of presenting, marking, packing, and delivering property for transportation, the facilities for transportation, and all other matters relating to or connected with the transporation of property in interstate or foreign commerce.

. . .

"UNDUE PREFERENCES OR PREJUDICES PROHIBITED

"(d) All charges made for any service rendered or to be rendered by any common carrier by motor vehicle engaged in interstate or foreign commerce in the transportation of passengers or property as aforesaid or in connection therewith shall be just and reasonable, and every unjust and unreasonable charge for such service or any part thereof, is prohibited and declared to be unlawful. It shall be unlawful for any common carrier by motor vehicle engaged in interstate or foreign commerce to make, give, or cause any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person, port, gateway, locality, region, district, territory, or description of traffic, in any respect whatsoever; or to subject any particular person, port, gateway, locality, region, district, territory, or description of traffic to any unjust discrimination or any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever; Provided, however, That this subsection shall not be construed to apply to discriminations, prejudice, or disadvantage to the traffic of any other carrier of whatever description:

. . .

"EFFECT ON REMEDY OR RIGHT OF ACTION

"(j) Nothing in this section shall be held to extinguish any remedy or right of action not inconsistent herewith. Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, Part II, §216, as added Aug. 9, 1935, c. 498, 49 Stat. 558, and amended June 29, 1938, c. 811, §16, 52 Stat. 1240; Sept. 18, 1940, c. 722, Title I, §22(b-d), 54 Stat. 924."

Statement of the Case.

This is an action brought by a shipper against several ICC-certificated motor common carriers seeking money damages for losses suffered as a consequence of the refusal of the carriers to provide service, in breach of their duty to do so. Petitioner in its complaint in the first cause alleged the breach by each of the respondent carriers (defendants and appellees below) of their common law and statutory duties to serve petitioner [1 Tr. 4-26].

The breach lay in the failure of the carriers to make pick-ups and deliveries of goods at petitioner's place of business, in response to reasonable requests on the part of petitioner [1 Tr. 6-7].

In the original complaint, petitioner asserted jurisdiction under 28 U. S. C. A., Section 1332, diversity of citizenship, and under Section 1337 on the theory that contained among the various duties enunciated by Sections 216(b) and (d) of the Motor Carrier Act was a restatement of the common law duty to provide service and to serve without unjust preference or discrimination; that this statutory sanction gives rise to a right on the part of shippers to receive such service and thus a right of action for damages occasioned by its breach, and that the cause, therefore, arose under an Act of Congress regulating commerce [1 Tr. 4].

Pursuant to appropriate motions to dismiss, the District Court, relying on Consolidated Freightways v. United Truck Lines (9th Cir. 1954), 216 F. 2d 543, decided that it did not have jurisdiction to hear and determine the controversy because ". . . the Motor Carrier Act does not provide any private remedy for a violation of any of its provisions" (Emphasis added) [1 Tr. 94].

The appeal in the first cause was taken from this decision, naming, as appellees, those defendants as against whom diversity of citizenship could not be shown [1 Tr. 95].[3]

[3]The original complaint was prepared and filed against a large number of defendants under circumstances of urgency, and it was not possible in the time at hand to ascertain the facts re-

Respondent then filed a first amended complaint (the second cause), bringing in certain additional carrier defendants and renaming those defendants to the original complaint which were not made appellees in the first appeal [2 Tr. 2-2h]; as to all of these, diversity of citizenship was this time alleged both generally and specifically [2 Tr. 2a-2d]. Petitioner again asserted jurisdiction on the basis of 28 U. S. C. A., Sections 1332 and 1337, but this time placed equal reliance upon petitioner's common law right of action against a common carrier for breach of the duty to render service, on the theory that this right survived the passage of and existed apart from the Motor Carrier Act [2 Tr. 2a-2b].

Answers, as well as affidavits of various parties, asserted in both causes that the failure or refusal of service was due to the existence of a peaceful picket line at petitioner's place of business [2 Tr. 13, 20, 27, 34, 41, 119, 127-128, 135, 143, 150-151; 46, 78-81, 84-89, 90; 1 Tr. 78-93; 302 F. 2d at p. 393].

Pursuant to motions timely brought, the District Court again dismissed, without opinion, for want of jurisdiction over the matter [2 Tr. 192]. From this decision, the second appeal (in 17380) was taken.

Petitioner's basic contentions are, as stated in the opinion of the Court of Appeals, that it, as a shipper, invoked the duty of a common carrier to serve and to render service without unjust preference or discrimina-garding the citizenship of all of the various defendants; it contained, therefore, only general allegations of diversity and no factual specifications. As a consequence, the court, on the motion to dismiss, did not reach the question of whether there existed a common law basis of action apart from statutory consideration."

---

tion; that the shipper's historic right of action at common law to recover damages in the courts for breach of that duty is in no way inconsistent with any power or exclusivity conferred upon the Interstate Commerce Commission (hereinafter referred to simply as "Commission") under the Motor Carrier Act; that the shipper's cause of action therefore continues in dual form both as a common law right under the savings clause of the Act (Sec. 216(j); 49 U. S. C. A., Sec. 316(j)), as well as under the statutory sanctions of Sections 216(b) and (d) (49 U. S. C. A., Sec. 316(b) and (d)); and that the Federal Courts have jurisdiction over such actions (302 F. 2d 391, 393).

The Court of Appeals, in its original opinion, struck down both of these contentions holding that no matter what the basis asserted, the courts are closed to shippers aggrieved by unreasonable disservice or unjust discrimination on the part of motor common carriers for the reason that "whenever under a claim by a shipper that a motor common carrier has failed to serve, there arises a genuine issue as to the reasonableness of such disservice or unjustness of such discriminations, there exists no remedy in the courts available to the shipper, for the crucial questions of reasonableness or unjustness cannot be decided by the court" (302 F. 2d at p. 394).

A further contention raised in opposition to the position of petitioner below, but not reached by the Court of Appeals because of the particular ground of the holding, was that the District Court was without jurisdiction because the controversy between the parties raised issues within the exclusive primary jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Board (hereinafter referred to simply as "Board") (302 F. 2d at p. 394).

This court granted certiorari upon the petition of this petitioner, vacated the judgment of the Court of Appeals and remanded for further consideration in the light of Hewitt-Robins, Inc. v. Eastern Freight-Ways, Inc. [(1962), 371 U. S. 84], 371 U. S. 184 (1962).

Accordingly, the causes were re-briefed and reargued before the Court of Appeals which, on 18 September, 1963, issued its opinion, holding:

(1) That petitioner did indeed have a common law cause of action for damages in the premises which survived the passage of the Motor Carrier Act;

(2) But that petitioner had no statutory rights, and therefore no right of action by virtue of the duty of service enunciated in Sections 216(b) and (d) of the Motor Carrier Act;

(3) That the Federal District Court had jurisdiction to hear and determine a common law cause of action on the basis of diversity only;

(4) That this jurisdiction was not vacated or preempted to the Board by the fact that the breach of duty was occasioned in part by the presence of a peaceful picket line at plaintiff's place of business;

(5) That the District Court, in further proceedings must determine to what extent, if any, petitioner's common law right has been "affected or qualified or supplemented" by the Motor Carrier Act or the Labor Management Relations Act; and

(6) That in this connection a District Court could require reference to either the Commission or the Board for such aid as might be necessary to the court's ultimate decision.

Argument for Allowance of Writ.

Two general questions of major importance to the transportation industry and those sections of the business community dependent upon it were originally presented by the within causes for resolution, at least in substantial part if not entirely, by the ultimate decision herein.

The first is the question of what, if any, shipper's damage actions against motor common carriers survived the passage of the Federal Motor Carrier Act. The specific point here involved is the shipper's right to recover damages for a breach of the duty to provide service. The second major question has to do with the extent to which such a right, assuming its existence, is affected by the existence of a peaceful picket line at the shipper's place of business as giving rise, at least in part, to the claimed breach of duty.

The paramount importance of these questions, the necessity for their resolution and the consequentially necessary resolution of a possible conflict between the national transportation policy and the national labor policy all signal the need for determination of these causes at this level.

We believe that this court itself indicated its recognition of the importance of these questions by its granting of the earlier petition for certiorari herein.

As a consequence of this court's judgment, the Court of Appeals, on remand, has resolved these questions in part, but in a manner which leaves the situation clouded with uncertainty and fraught with anomaly.

The Court of Appeals now holds that a shipper does have a common law cause of action preserved to it for damages for breach of a carrier's duty to provide service and that the Federal Courts have jurisdiction of such causes where diversity exists; however, in an area where Congress and the courts have stressed the primacy of harmony and consistency between the common law and the statutes erecting a scheme of Federal regulation, the court's opinion creates a major inconsistency and disharmony by holding that the Federal statutory counterpart of the common law duty to provide service does not form the basis for any shipper's remedy and cannot, therefore, provide a statutory basis for jurisdiction.

Thus, the court has declared, in effect, that the statutory duty is inconsistent with the common law duty, that it creates a right without a remedy and that the Federal Courts have no jurisdiction over those very causes which involve and require the interpretation of a Federal statute!

This holding patently requires clarification and in itself argues for issuance of the writ in this cause. However, with specific reference to the criteria enunciated by Rule 19, we discuss the matter further below.

(1) The Decision of the Court of Appeals on Remand Conflicts With Decisions of Courts of Appeals in Different Circuits as Well as With Decisions of Federal District Courts in Other Circuits on the Same Matter.

The Court of Appeals has held that the Motor Carrier Act created no statutory basis of action for breach of the duty to provide service, cognizable in the Federal Courts in the first instance and that there existed, therefore, no jurisdiction in the Court below of the causes of action against those defendants as to whom diversity could not be shown (Opin. on remand, p. 2).

The Court reaches this conclusion by interpreting the holding of this court in Hewitt-Robins as extending only to the survival of the common law right there involved.

We believe, as we argue below, that the opinion contravenes the actual teaching of Hewitt-Robins. In addition, however, it creates a direct conflict with the decision of the Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit in Meier & Pohlman Furniture Co. v. Gibbons (1956), 233 F. 2d 296 (cert. den. 352 U. S. 879). In that case jurisdiction was held to extend to the entire complaint, specifically including those causes of action based upon the same breach of statutory duty as here asserted.

The Court of Appeals decision herein is likewise in conflict with a Federal District Court case which reached the same conclusion as the Court of Appeals in Meier & Pohlman, supra: Merchandise Warehouse Company v. ABC Freight Forwarding Corp. (1958, S. D. Ind.—7th Cir.), 165 Fed. Supp. 67.

(2) The Opinion of the Court of Appeals on Remand Constitutes a Misapplication of Decisions of This Court.

We further submit that the Court of Appeals, in upholding a common law right of action but denying the statutory right and therefore any independent basis for jurisdiction in the Federal Courts, has misapplied the teaching of the pertinent decisions of this court. In T.I.M.E., Inc. v. United States (1959), 159 U. S. 464, 3 L. Ed. 2d 952, 79 S. Ct. 904, originally felt by the Court of Appeals herein to control, both statutory and common law bases of action were asserted by the government and, because of considerations impinging upon the exclusivity of the Commission's rate making powers, these were held not to exist.

Petitioner has argued from the outset that the rule in T.I.M.E. v. United States was inapposite.

T.I.M.E. v. United States, supra, was advanced by the defendant as controlling in Hewitt-Robins v. Eastern Freight-Ways, supra, and was upheld in this contention by the lower courts. The plaintiff in that action, who also asserted common law and statutory bases of action (the latter grounded in the identical statutory sections herein relied on by plaintiff) also vigorously denied the applicability of T.I.M.E. v. United States, supra, to its cause. 187 F. Supp. 722, 723; 293 F. 2d 205, 206.

The parallel between the instant cause and Hewitt-Robins is an obvious one, and this court so recognized when it granted certiorari, vacated and remanded with the direction that the cause be reconsidered in the light of that decision.

The primary significance, we take it, of this court's holding in Hewitt-Robins was its conclusion, that T.I.M.E. v. United States, supra, did not control and was not appropriate to the situation there presented; we further take it that the decision in this cause carried with it the same unmistakable implication.

While the bulk of this court's opinion in Hewitt-Robins is addressed to a discussion of the survival of the common law basis of action, it seems apparent that the reason for this starting point is that the key to the situation lies in the consistency of such a right of action with the statutory scheme embodied within the Motor Carrier Act. The two must be in harmony and consistent one with the other or the common law cause of action, by definition, could not survive. Motor Carrier Act, Section 216(j) [49 U. S. C. A. §316(j)]; 371 U. S. 89.

The Court of Appeals, consonant with Hewitt-Robins, held that the common law duty to provide service created a right in shippers to receive such service and that a cause of action accrued to shippers who were damaged by a Carrier's breach of this duty. To hold otherwise would be to affirm the existence of a right, but to render it meaningless by denying any remedy for its vindication.

This same consequence we submit must follow from the statutory enunciation of the common law duty to provide service as embodied in Sections 216(b) and (d) [49 U. S. C. A. §316(b) and (d)]. That is to say, the statutory duties thus imposed upon carriers must, at the same time, give rise to a right in shippers to receive such service, as well as a remedy for the assertion and vindication of that right when the duty is breached. To hold otherwise, would violate the symmetry of the statutory and common law scheme, would create an inconsistency between the statutory and the common law duty and right, one which would, by the terms of the savings clause, require the extinction of the common law remedy.

Manifestly, therefore, the considerations applicable to the statutory as well as the common law rights of action asserted in T.I.M.E. v. United States, supra, must both be held inapplicable and inapposite here, and we believe this court so intended, for no other result can flow from the conclusion that the common law remedy here, and in Hewitt-Robins; survived.

The Court of Appeals has here held otherwise and has thus created an anomaly between the Motor Carrier Act and the common law and, in effect, stultified the whole theory and basis of this court's conclusion in Hewitt-Robins upholding the common law basis of action.

(3) The Opinion of the Court of Appeals on Remand Has Decided Important Questions of Federal Law Which Have Not Been, but Should Be, Settled by This Court.

From what we have said before, it will be apparent that these causes present a number of important questions of Federal law which have not been, but should be, decided by this court.

The most important of these, in the present posture of the matter, is the resolution of the inconsistency between statutory and common law bases of action created by the Court of Appeals opinion on remand. We strongly believe that this result was not intended by this court and that it represents a misinterpretation of the teaching of Hewitt-Robins.

If we assume, for the sake of argument, however, that this court's opinion in Hewitt-Robins intended to reach no further than a holding as to the existence of a common law basis of action, then the result reached below by the Court of Appeals on remand of itself emphasizes the importance of the questions still left undecided, as well as the necessity for their resolution.

A few of th ramifications of the holding on remand illustrate this.

Under this decision, a Federal Court could entertain only common law actions for damage in situations where diversity existed. The State court would then be the only forum open to non-diversity parties. However, the court has indicated that such actions abound with implications impinging upon the national transportation policy and the national labor policy, involving interpretations and possibly applications of the Motor Carrier Act as well as the Labor Management Relations Act, and the court further indicates that conflicts between these statutes and these policies will undoubtedly have to be resolved at the trial court level in the process of determining and adjudicating the rights of the parties (Opin. on remand, p. 4).

It seems somewhat anomalous to say that in non-diversity cases, a Federal Court is excluded from jurisdiction to determine such important questions of Federal law and policy on the one hand, and that a State Court must address itself to this task. Such a result, moreover, would hardly be conducive to the stability and uniformity of Federal carrier policy and practice which was one of the principal objects sought to be achieved by the Motor Carrier Act. T.I.M.E. v. United States, supra, 359 U. S. at p. 475, n. 14; see also Hewitt-Robins v. Eastern Freightways, 371 U. S. at p. 89.

The Court below further indicates that the Trial Court may well have to strike a balance between what it terms the "conflicting impacts of apparently conflicting Federal statutes upon these common law rights." (Opin. on remand, p. 4). This seems to us to be only emphasizing the pertinency of the basis for jurisdiction petitioner has consistently urged—namely the existence of important rights and questions arising under Federal laws regulating commerce. Again it seems to us singularly inappropriate to require that this balance be struck by a State Court in one case and by a Federal Court in the other.

The Court below additionally indicates that it may also be necessary for the Trial Court to refer or require reference to the Commission or the Board . . . for such aid as may be necessary or useful to that Court's ultimate decision." (Opin. on remand, p. 3). This procedure itself has no statutory sanction, but is as noted by this court in T.I.M.E. v. United States, supra, as well as in Hewitt-Robins, supra, a practice which has grown up in the determination of certain matters involving the Interstate Commerce Act. However, we are unaware of any instance in which it has been suggested that a State Court might be required to refer to a Federal agency some aspect of a matter properly before it, as a condition precedent to fulfilling the exercise of its own jurisdiction. Again, the mere statement simply emphasizes the pertinency of Federal law as well as procedure to actions involving federally certificated motor carriers, and the appropriateness of Federal Court jurisdiction over such actions in every instance not simply because of the chance circumstance of diversity, but because of the overriding pertinency and essentiality of such actions of Federal law, policy and practice.

In other words, while denying the statutory right of action and a consequent basis of Federal Court Jurisdiction under 28 U. S. C. A., Sec. 1337, the Court develops and underlines and emphasizes the pertinency to such common law actions of numerous questions involving Federal statutory law, policy, practice and procedure, and compels the conclusion that Federal Court jurisdiction attaches thus by virtue of 28 U. S. C. A., Sec. 1331, independent of the existence of diversity of citizenship.

One further question raised by this suggestion of the Court below presents itself as an independent and almost equally important question for resolution, namely, the question of whether or not such a reference to the National Labor Relations Board can properly be required or had in any event. It is apparent that the framers of the Labor Management Relations Act considered the federal courts fully competent to adjudicate, within the ambit of their own jurisdiction, any and all questions pertinent to actions for damages under the Act, particularly and specifically including actions for damages caused as a consequence of unfair labor practices. Labor Management Relations Act, Section 303 (Labor Mgmt. Relations Act of 1947, as amended by Public Law 86-257, 1959; 29 U. S. C. §187).

In addition to the important questions tendered by the decision below and the anomalies which it creates, we further urge that this same opinion requires the Trial Court and the parties to embark upon a voyage in unchartered waters with virtually no aids to navigation.

It is incumbent upon the Trial Court to determine "what effect . . . [the Motor Carrier Act] . . . or any other Federal statute may have upon the surviving common law cause of action . . ." (Op. p. 2.)

It must also determine ". . . to what extent, if any, the common law right has been affected or qualified or supplemented by the Motor Carrier Act . . . or the Labor Management Relations Act, . . . either, neither or both." (Op. p. 3).

The Court must further determine whether the facts make reference to the Commission or the Board appropriate and, must also, presumably, determine whether or not a reference to either of these bodies is authorized or appropriate in any event. (Op. p. 3).

Lastly, the District Court and the parties are enjoined to balance the common law rights of the parties in the light of pertinent Federal statutes, which appear to be conflicting with the common law rights of the parties. (Op. p. 4.) (This in itself points up the major anomaly in the court's decision, as we have argued above, since it constitutes a statement of the court's belief that an inconsistency does exist between the common law and the statutory duty which, by definition of the savings clause cannot occur in the premises!)

The court concedes that "resolution may not be easy", certainly a masterpiece of understatement, particularly in view of the utter absence of any guide lines to follow in resolving these conflicts, striking these balances or ascertaining precisely what assistance might or could properly be requested of either the Commission or the Board.

If indeed, the trial of the within causes must entail these various determinations, criteria are essential and can be authoritatively supplied only by this court.

Conclusion.

From what we have said, we believe it is evident that the importance of the questions involved in this cause, as well as the uncertainty and confusion presently existing, compel the granting of the within Petition and the issuance of the Writ, as prayed.

Respectfully submitted,

HILL, FARRER & BURRILL,
By CARL M. GOULD,
Attorneys for Petitioner.

APPENDIX A.

Opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

302 F. 2d 391 (1962)

United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Pensick & Gordon, Inc., Appellant, vs. California Motor Express, et al., Appellees. No. 17,235.

Pensick & Gordon, Inc., a California corporation, Appellant, vs. California Motor Express, Limited, a corporation, et al., Appellees. No. 17,380.

April 13, 1962.

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Southern District of California, Central Division.

Before: Barnes and Jertberg, Circuit Judges; and Pence, District Judge.

Pence, District Judge:

This is an action for money damages brought by shipper against several motor common carrier defendants. The shipper (Appellant), in its original complaint (App. No. 17235) alleged the breach by each of the common carriers (Appellees) of their statutory duty to serve the appellant under the Motor Carrier Act (hereinafter referred to as "MCA."), part II of the Interstate Commerce Act, Section 216 (b) and (d), (49 U.S.C.A., Sections 316 (b) and (d)).[1] The breach

---

[1]Section 216 of the MCA (49 U.S.C.A. §316) reads, in pertinent part, as follows:

"(b). It shall be the duty of every common carrier of property by motor vehicle to provide . . . adequate service, to establish . . . just and reasonable . . . practices relating . . . to the manner and method of delivering property for transportation . . .", and "(d). It shall be unlawful for any common carrier by motor vehicle . . . to subject any particular person . . . to any unjust discrimination or any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage."

alleged was failure of the appellees to pick up and make delivery of goods at appellant's place of business, upon reasonabe terms and without unjust discrimination.

In the original complaint, appellant asserted jurisdiction as to all appellees under 28 U.S.C.A. 1337, on the theory that the MCA gave a shipper the right under the Commerce clause to bring an action for damages in the United States District Court for breach by motor common carriers of their statutory duty to serve shippers and to serve without discrimination. The District Court, relying on Consolidated Freightways v. United Trucklines, (9 Cir., 1954), 216 F2d 543, decided that it did not have jurisdiction to hear and determine the controversy because the MCA does not provide any private remedy for a violation of any of its provisions, from which decision the appeal in No. 17235 was taken.

Appellant filed an amended complaint, again asserting jurisdiction lay in the District Court as to all appellees by virtue of the same 28 U.S.C.A. 1337, and also asserted jurisdiction on the premise that there exists a common law right of court action to enforce the common law duty of common carriers to serve without discrimination, apart from the statute, which common law rights survived the passage of the MCA, and that since diversity existed as to some of the appellees, jurisdiction lay in the District Court by virtue of 28 U.S.C.A. 1332.

Answers, as well as affidavits filed by all parties clearly showed that the failure to serve and the discrimination complained against resulted from the refusal of appellees' unionized drivers to cross a picket line thrown up around appellant's place of business by appellant's employees as a result of a strike at appellant's plant. In determining the existence or nonexistence of the requisite jurisdictional facts, the District Court properly inquired into and weighed all answers and affidavits. Williams v. Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Company, 14 FRD 1, 4-8, SDCal. 1953, and Ramirez and Feraud Chili Company v. Las Palmas Food Company, 146 F.Supp. 594, AFFD, 245 F2d 874 (9 Cir. 1957), Cert. Den. 355 US 927, 1958.

From a ruling by the District Court that still it was without jurisdiction to try appellant's amended complaint, a second appeal, No. 17380, was taken. Both appeals, No. 17235 and No. 17380, were joined for the purpose of argument and disposition.

Appellant's basic contentions are that it, as a shipper, has invoked the common law duty of a common carrier to serve; that the shipper's historic right of action for breach of that duty is in no way inconsistent with any power exclusively conferred upon the Interstate Commerce Commission under the MCA; and that the shipper's cause of action continues in dual form both as a common law right under the savings clause of the Act, 216 (j), (49 U.S.C.A. 316 (j)) as well as the statutory sanctions of Section 216 (b) and (d).

Since the facts as shown by the complaints, answers and affidavits clearly demonstrate that the alleged breach of duty of service arose out of the failure of the defendants to serve because of appellant's own labor dispute and appellees' employees' refusal to cross the appellant's union's picket line at appellant's plant, the alleged breach, by the very nature of those facts, depends upon the element of reasonableness or unreasonableness of the acts of appellees' employees in so refusing to cross the picket line. This, per se, demands the factual determination as to whether or not the carrier failed to provide reasonable service without unjust discrimination as delineated in part II of the MCA, Sections 216 (b) and (d). The question of jurisdiction is thereby brought squarely within the purview of T.I.M.E. v. United States, 359 U. S. 464, 3 L. Ed. 2d 952, 79 S. Ct. 904, and Consolidated Freightways v. United Truck Lines, supra, and the rationale of those cases is directly applicable here.

The legislative history of the MCA is fully covered in T.I.M.E., supra, and Consolidated Freightways v. United Truck Lines, 216 Ore. 515, 330 P. 2d 522, cert. den. 355 U. S. 1001. It is clear from that history that the MCA undertook to set forth a comprehensive and all-inclusive scheme for the Federal regulation of common motor carriers. As heretofore indicated, Section 216 as it applies to the instant case, provides that carriers may not unreasonably refuse to serve or unjustly discriminate against any shipper. Therefore, in every case in which the problem of carrier compliance with the service or discrimination clauses of Section 216 of the MCA is raised, there must be a determination by the Commission of whether there has been a disservice or discrimination with respect to treatment of shippers, and whether such treatment was unreasonable or unjustly discriminatory. "Whether a carrier has without justification failed to provide reasonable and nondiscriminatory service is a question of defining the carrier's duty in the framework of the National Transportation Policy." Carpenters' Union v. Labor Board, 357 U. S. 93, 110, and only the Commission can answer that question.

Under the statutory scheme of the MCA, only the ICC can decide in the first instance whether any alleged act of disservice on the part of the appellees was unreasonable or unjustly discriminatory and the courts are without authority to make such a determination. If, under the saving clause, §216 (j) of the MCA, no common law remedy is saved to a shipper, aggrieved by an unreasonable rate, which was held in T.I.M.E. to be an administrative question, no such remedy is saved to a shipper aggrieved by unreasonable disservice or unjust discrimination, which also is an administrative question, as held in Carpenters' Union v. Labor Board, supra. Whenever, under a claim by a shipper that a motor common carrier has failed to serve, there arises a genuine issue as to the reasonableness of such disservice or unjustness of such discrimination, there exists no remedy in the courts available to the shipper, for the crucial questions of reasonableness or unjustness cannot be decided by the courts.

It is not necessary for us to decide, and we do not so decide, that no common law actions have survived the MCA, but where, as appellant recognized here,[2]

---

[2] "The gist of the action is the failure of the Defendants individually, at specified times, to provide service to the Plaintiff upon reasonable terms and without discrimination."
App. No. 17235, Apnt. Op. Br., p. 1.

"This cause is the companion to that in Ap. No. 17235 . . . The theories of the first and second causes are identical."
Ap. No. 17380, Apnt. Op. Br., p. 1, 2.

"Sec. 216(b) and (d) of the Motor Carrier Act . . . contains . . . a statutory embodiment of this . . . (common law duty of a common carrier to serve).

"The commission has further refined the general standards laid down by the statute . . .

"The foregoing are the standards by which the conduct of the Appellees must be measured, and this Appellant does not question the standards; it seeks only to establish a failure to conform to them . . ."
Aps. No. 17235, No. 17380, Apnt. Reply Br., p. 3.

the real issue is whether or not the carrier has failed to provide service to a shipper on reasonable terms and without unjust discrimination, the District Court is without jurisdiction to hear and determine it.

Having decided these appeals on the above grounds, we do not find it necessary to pass upon the merits of appellees' affirmative defense that the District Court was without jurisdiction because the controversy between the parties raised issues which are within the exclusive primary jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Board.

As to each appeal, we hold the District Court correctly dismissed each complaint for lack of jurisdiction.

Affirmed.

(Endorsed) Opinion Filed April 13, 1962.

Frank H. Schmid, Clerk.

APPENDIX B.

Supreme Court of the United States.

No. 222. Pensick & Gordon, Inc., Petitioner, v. California Motor Express et al.

On Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

December 3, 1962. Per Curiam: The Petition for Writ of Certiorari is granted. The judgment is vacated and the case is remanded for further consideration in light of Hewitt-Robins, Inc. v. Eastern Freight-Ways, Inc., No. 37, October Term, 1962, decided November 19, 1962.

Mr. Justice Harlan, Mr. Justice Stewart, and Mr. Justice White would affirm the judgment below for the reasons given in the dissenting opinion in No. 37.

APPENDIX C.

Opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Supreme Court of the United States.

No. 37.—October Term, 1962.

Hewitt-Robins, Incorporated, Petitioner, v. Eastern Freight-Ways, Inc.

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

[Noyember 19, 1962.]

Mr. Justice Clark delivered the opinion of the Court.

This is an action by a shipper to recover from a motor carrier the difference in rate charges resulting from a practice of the latter of carrying unrouted intrastate shipments on its interstate routes at higher rates than those applicable to its available intrastate routes. The District Court for the Southern District of New York stayed the action awaiting a finding by the Interstate Commerce Commission as to the reasonableness of the practice. The Commission found it unreasonable* under the Motor Carrier Act, 49 U. S. C.

*302 I. C. C. 173. Respondent brought an action against the United States and the Commission in the District Court for the District of New Jersey, seeking to set aside the report and cease-and-desist order entered by the Commission. After the complaint was filed the Commission amended its disposition by striking out the cease-and-desist order, leaving only its declaratory findings as to past practices. The three-judge court, relying upon our decision in United States v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 337 U. S. 426 (1949), held that as a three-judge court it had no authority to adjudicate the controversy since no order was under attack. 170 F. Supp. 848. Decision in the action is now held in abeyance by a single judge pending disposition of this litigation. Thus the litigation has been bifurcated into two District Courts, whose further proceedings may yet be separately appealable. This might have been avoided had the District Court for the Southern District of New York followed this Court's §§ 301-327, and subsequently the District Court dismissed the complaint on the ground that the Act neither provided any reparation remedy nor preserved one at common law. 187 F. Supp. 722. The Court of Appeals, one judge dissenting, affirmed on the same grounds. 293 F. 2d 205. Each court bottomed its decision upon T. I. M. E., Inc., v. United States, 359 U. S. 464 (1959). Having some doubts as to the appositeness of that case and because of the importance of the question in the administration of the Act, we granted certiorari. 368 U. S. 951. We have concluded that T. I. M. E., Inc., supra, does not control the issue here and therefore reverse the judgments.

The petitioner alleges that between January 1, 1953, and February 1, 1955, it delivered numerous shipments of foam rubber pads to respondent, a common carrier by motor vehicle, for transportation from Buffalo, N. Y., to New York City. It claims that while the shipments were tendered without specifying the routes of shipment the respondent, contrary to its duty as a common carrier, shipped the pads over its interstate route at the higher tariff that it had on file with the Interstate Commerce Commission rather than over its intrastate route at the lower tariff that it had on file with the Public Service Commission of New York. Excess charges in the sum of $10,000 have been collected by respondent for which petitioner prays judgment.

---

admonition that "the courts, while retaining the final authority to expound the statute, should avail themselves of the aid implicit in the agency's superiority in gathering the relevant facts and in marshalling them into a meaningful pattern." Federal Maritime Board v. Isbrandtsen Co., 356 U. S. 481, 498 (1958), rather than relying upon the shipper to file an adversary proceeding with the Commission.

The sole issue before us is whether the complaint states a cause of action upon which the District Court may grant relief. The gist of the action as alleged is that the shipper had the common-law right and the carrier owed it the duty to ship the pads over the cheapest available route, no adequate justification for not so doing being shown. Nevertheless, petitioner says, the carrier in derogation of this responsibility transported the pads at the higher rate and subjected the shipper to the $10,000 damage.

No attack is made upon either of the carrier's published tariffs—both are admittedly reasonable. The controversy hinges entirely upon whether the carrier violated its duty to the shipper in selecting the interstate route and the accompanying higher rate which subjected the shipper to the loss, i.e., the difference between the two lawful rates. We believe that the complaint stated a justiciable cause of action. The issue here is a far cry from that in T. I. M. E., Inc. v. United States, supra. There the question, as stated by the Court, was, "Can a shipper of goods by a certificated motor carrier challenge in postshipment litigation the reasonableness of the carrier's charges which were made in accordance with the tariff governing the shipment?" 359 U. S. 464, 465. The Court determined that such an attack was foreclosed by the "savings clause" of the Act, § 216 (j), 49 U. S. C. § 316 (j), as being inconsistent with the statutory scheme of regulation. We emphasized the built in protections given shippers against unreasonable rates, at pp. 478-480, citing the 30-day notice provision of the Act, § 216 (g), as well as the power granted the Commission under § 217 (c) to suspend rates for seven months. The Court concluded that those remedies amply protected the shipper and that the allowance of a judicial remedy would result in undercutting the stability of the rate structure which the statutory procedures sought to insure.

Here the challenge is directed not at the "reasonableness" of the rates but at the carrier's misrouting practice. The question, therefore, is not one of rates but of routes. The determination of rail carriers' routing practices has long been within the primary jurisdiction of the Commission. Northern Pacific R. Co. v. Solum, 247 U. S. 477 (1918). This jurisdiction is the more important in the case of motor carrier routing where alternative routes are greater in both number and variety. Furthermore, selection of the route is usually made on an ad hoc basis, precluding preshipment determination of its reasonableness. Unlike rate making there is no statutory procedure by which routing practices may be challenged in advance of shipment. Nor is the shipper by truck accorded even the right given the shipper by rail, under 49 U. S. C. § 15 (8), to select and request a particular route of the carrier. In view of these weighty statutory differences between ratemaking and routing practices the survival of a damage claim for misrouting appears entirely consistent with the Act. It, therefore, meets the proviso of the "saving clause" as well as the teaching of T. I. M. E., Inc.

This conclusion is buttressed by the fact that the allowance here of a damage action in nowise hampers the efficient administration of the Act, unlike the allowance of such an action as to unreasonable rates. A misrouting claim does not jeopardize the stability of tariffs or of certificated routes, the sole issue being whether the carrier routed the shipment over the cheapest available route, or made a showing of adequate justification for not doing so. Moreover, the allowance of misrouting actions would have a healthy deterrent effect upon the utilization of misrouting practices in the motor carrier field, which, in turn, would minimize "cease and desist" proceedings before the Commission. Finally, and not to be overlooked, the absence of any judicial remedy places the shipper entirely at the mercy of the carrier, contrary to the overriding purpose of the Act. The allowance of such actions would, on the contrary, give neither an unfair advantage.

Those who contend that no judicial remedy is available place much weight on the fact that, as we have said, the Interstate Commerce Commission has primary jurisdiction in routing practices. We put no significance in whether one tags the claim as "overcharges" as Commissioner Eastman apparently did in his testimony before the Senate, see T. I. M. E., Inc., supra, at 477-478, n. 18, or whether it is a proceeding involving the "reasonableness" of routing practices. In either case the problem is one originally within the jurisdiction of the Commission. To say, however, that such primary jurisdiction compels the conclusion that the courts are without power to award damages in every instance where the Commission may not award reparations by no means follows. Indeed, the doctrine of primary jurisdiction is designed to apply "where a claim is originally cognizable in the courts, and . . . enforcement of the claim requires the resolution of issues . . . placed within the special competence of an administrative body . . ." United States v. Western Pacific R. Co., 352

U. S. 59, 64 (1956); see Davis, Administrative Law Treatise, § 19.01 (1958). The practice of the Commission in making such determination in the first instance, even though it has no power to award reparations in a given case, has long been exercised, Bell Potato Chip Co. v. Aberdeen Truck Line, 43 M. C. C. 337, 343 (1944), and is supported by a long line of cases. See Thompson v. Texas Mexican R. Co., 328 U. S. 134 (1946), and cases there cited. Be this as it may, the survival of a judicial remedy under the savings clause of § 216 (j) cannot be determined on the presence or absence in the Commission of primary jurisdiction to decide the basic question on which relief depends. Survival depends on the effect of the exercise of the remedy upon the statutory scheme of regulation. According to § 216 (j), if the remedy is inconsistent with that scheme it does not survive. In T. I. M. E., Inc., we found inconsistencies and hence no judicial remedy survived. Here, as we have indicated, rather than running interference against the Act the exercise of the judicial remedy supports its overall purposes and is in nowise inconsistent with the congressional scheme embodied within its four corners. The remedy, therefore, survives and the judgment is Reversed.

Supreme Court of the United States.

No. 37.—October Term, 1962.

Hewitt-Robins, Incorporated, Petitioner, v. Eastern Freight-Ways, Inc.

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

[November 19, 1962.]

Mr. Justice Harlan, whom Mr. Justice Stewart and Mr. Justice White join, dissenting.

With deference, I consider that the T. I. M. E. case, 359 U. S. 464, plainly controls this one. That it does control is not and could hardly be gainsaid to the extent that the complaint purports to allege a statutory cause of action, that is, one based on the terms of the Motor Carrier Act itself. T. I. M. E., at 468-472. However, construing the complaint as alleging also a common-law cause of action, the Court holds that such an action is "not inconsistent" with the Motor Carrier Act and is therefore preserved by § 216 (j) of the statute.

The Court's decision rests primarily on the significance it accords to the existence of certain administrative procedures available to shippers to challenge rates in advance of their application, see §§ 216 (g) and 217 (c) of the Act, and the lack of such protective remedies in the case of routing practices. In addition, three further considerations are asserted to support its conclusion: (1) a misrouting claim does not jeopardize the stability of tariffs or of certificated routes, whereas to permit actions attacking the reasonableness of rates would hamper the efficient administration of the Act; (2) the allowance of misrouting actions will deter misrouting practices and decrease the number of "cease and desist" proceedings before the I. C. C.; (3) the absence of any judicial remedy would put the shipper entirely at the mercy of the carrier, contrary to the purpose of the Motor Carrier Act. This reasoning, I submit, entirely misconceives the basis of the T. I. M. E. decision.

The result reached in T. I. M. E. basically rested on two interdependent considerations: (1) the courts may not adjudicate a matter over which the Commission has been given primary jurisdiction, 350 U. S., at 473-474; (2) since the Commission must decide whether a rate is reasonable and Congress has denied it the authority to award reparations for past unreasonable charges, to allow a judicial remedy for recovery of past rate charges would "permit the I. C. C. to accomplish indirectly what Congress has not chosen to give it authority to accomplish directly," id., at 475.

Both of these factors are present here. There can be no doubt that under § 216 (b) and (c) of the Interstate Commerce Act the Commission has primary jurisdition over the complained of misrouting practices,[1] as indeed the Commission's action taken with respect to these very practices, Hewitt-Robins, Inc., v. Eastern Freight-Ways, Inc., 302 I. C. C. 173, and the Court's opinion in this case show. Nor is it suggested that the Commission possesses any reparations authority with respect to such misrouting. The conjunction of these factors thus brings T. I. M. E., decided only four Terms ago, into full play.

---

[1]Section 216(b) of the Interstate Commerce Act, 49 U. S. C. § 316(b), provides in pertinent part: "It shall be the duty of every common carrier of property by motor vehicle . . . to . . . observe . . . reasonable . . . practices . . . relating to or connected with the transportation of property in interstate . . . commerce." Section 216(c) provides that whenever "the Commission shall be of the opinion that any . . . practice . . . is or will be unjust and unreasonable . . . it shall determine . . . the lawful . . . practice."

1. It is true that in this instance the Act does not contain certain protective provisions as in the case of rate-making. This cannot, however, serve to distinguish T. I. M. E., whose determination of the congressional purpose underlying the Motor Carrier Act was based on considerations that stand quite independently of the impact of particular provisions of the statute. It should also be noted that the absence of such provisions does not mean that carriers may follow misrouting practices with impunity. Section 212 (a) of the Act provides that the Commission may, on its own initiative or on complaint, suspend or revoke certificates, permits, or licenses for willful failure to comply with any provision of the Act or any order or regulation of the Commission. Under § 216 (a) the Commission may order the termination of an unjust practice and prescribe the lawful practice to be followed. Section 222 (a) imposes fines for violations of the Act, and § 222 (b) confers jurisdiction on the District Courts to enjoin violations of the Act when application is made by the Commission.

2. If the issue as to the reasonableness of a routing practice is referred to the Commission, a procedure the Court recognizes as essential, allowance of a judicial remedy for misrouting will not jeopardize the stability of tariffs or of certificated routes. But the suggestion that such a danger was presented by a court action challenging unreasonable rates and that this contributed to the decision in T. I. M. E. is manifestly untenable. It was conceded there, as of course it had to be under prior decisions of this Court,[2] that the primary jurisdiction doctrine compelled referral to the Commission of all issues as to the reasonableness of the rates. Since even if a judicial remedy were allowed the Commission would have been the tribunal deciding the basic question, the course of decision would have been uniform and there would not have been, any more than here, interference with the Commission's functioning in the area of its special competence or any threat to the stability of the rate structure. Moreover, the possibility that rate actions might constitute a threat to the rate structure through stimulating excessive litigation could hardly have been regarded as a significant factor in T. I. M. E., for it was there observed that only a handful of actions to recover for unreasonable charges had been brought in the previous 24 years. 359 U. S., at 479. And if the Court now believes that to have been a relevant consideration in T. I. M. E., it should certainly be of greater weight with respect to misrouting claims, which are likely to arise more frequently because, as the Court points out, "selection of the route is usually made on an ad hoc basis, precluding preshipment determination of its reasonableness."[3]

---

[2]See, e.g., Texas & Pacific R. Co. v. American Tie & Timber Co., 234 U. S. 138; Texas & Pacific R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426.

[3]If the Court's reference to Commissioner Eastman's statement quoted in T. I. M. E., at 477-478, n. 18, is intended to imply that the present action may be characterized as one for rate "overcharges" and thus is permissible, it should be noted that the "overcharges" to which the Commissioner referred were, as his statements makes clear, charges "above published tariff rates," id., at 478, not those resulting, as alleged here, from the application of a wrong tariff. It is only the former that the Commisioner thought could be recovered "in court as the law now stands." Id., at 478.

3: Finally, as to the suggestions that actions such as this should be allowed because of their incidental deterrent effect on misrouting practices and in the interest of justice to shippers, it need only be said that these are matters for the Congress.[4] Our duty is to apply the statute as we find it.

I would affirm.

---

[4]So far, Congress has refused to act. See H. R. 8031, 86th Cong., 1st Sess. (1959); 359 U. S., at 471-472 and notes 10, 11.

APPENDIX D.

Opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Pensick & Gordon, Inc., Appellant, vs. California Motor Express, et al., Appellees. Nos. 17,235 and 17,-380 Sept. 18, 1963.

On Appeal from the United States District Court for the Southern District of California, Central Division.

Before: Barnes and Jertberg, Circuit Judges and Weigel, District Judge.

Weigel, District Judge.

When these cases were considered by us last year,[1] we held that the District Court was without jurisdiction to determine whether or not appellee motor carriers failed to provide service as required by Section 216 of the Motor Carrier Act (49 U.S.C.A. §316). We affirmed dismissal of a complaint grounded in claims of violation of that statute because of our view that the statute itself vested such jurisdiction exclusively in the Interstate Commerce Commission. We held, further, that the effort of appellant, in an amended complaint, to assert a common law right of action for failure to provide service raised identical issues and was, therefore, also rightly dismissed by the District Court upon the same grounds.

The Supreme Court has now remanded to us "for further consideration in light of Hewitt-Robins Inc. v. Eastern Freight-Ways, Inc., [371 U.S. 84 (1962)]". 371 U.S. 184 (1962).

---

[1] 302 F.2d 391 (1962).

In the light of Hewitt-Robins, we now hold that the amended complaint states a common law cause of action which survived enactment of the Motor Carrier Act. What effect that statute or any other federal statute may have upon the surviving common law cause of action will have to be determined by the District Court in further proceedings.

We do not read Hewitt-Robins as holding that the Motor Carrier Act created a statutory cause of action cognizable in the federal courts in the first instance. Hewitt-Robins considered only the survival of the common law right there involved. It did not change the holdings in T.I.M.E. Inc. v. United States, 359 U.S. 464 (1959) nor Consolidated Freightways v. United Truck Lines, 216 F.2d 543 (9th Cir., 1954) upon which we relied in deciding that the first complaint, grounded in claimed violations of statutory right, was properly dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

Therefore, the further proceedings below, grounded solely in common-law rights, will be limited to the plaintiff and to those defendants as to whom diversity exists.

The starting point for further proceedings on the cause of action sounding in common law will rest, of course, upon the long recognized doctrine that a cause of action does exist against a common carrier for unjustified failure or refusal to transport freight. The California cases include: Samuelson v. Public Utilities Commission, 36 C.2d 722, 227 P.2d 256 (1951); Chase v. South Pacific Coast R. Co., 83 Cal. 468, 23 Pac. 532 (1890); Tarbell v. Central Pac. R. Co., 34 Cal. 616 (1868) (passenger); American Fruit Distributors v. Hines, 55 C.A. 377, 203 Pac. 921 (1921). The cases in other jurisdictions include: Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Larabee Flour Mills Co., 211 U.S. 612 (1909); York Co. v. Central R., 70 U.S. (3 Wall.) 107 (1865); New Jersey Steam Navigation Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 47 U.S. (6 How.) 343 (1848); Swayne & Hoyt, Inc. v. Everett, 255 Fed. 71 (9th Cir., 1919); Moor v. Texas & N. O. R. Co., 75 F.2d 386 (5th Cir., 1935); Merchandise Warehouse Co. v. A.B.C. Freight For. Corp., 165 F.Supp. 67 (S.D. Ind., 1958); Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Northern Pacific Terminal Co., 128 F.Supp. 475 (D. Ore., 1953); Louisville & N.R. Co. v. Falls City etc. Co., 61 S.W. 2d 639 (Ct. Ap. Ky., 1933); Nelson v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 82 S.E. 868 (S.Ct. N.C., 1914); Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Racer, 31 N.E. 853 (Ap. Ct. Ind., 1892); Avinger v. South Carolina R. Co., 7 S.E. 493 (S.Ct. S.C., 1888); Central & M.R. Co. v. Morris, 3 S.W. 457 (S. Ct. Tex., 1887).

Appellees again strongly urge upon us that the jurisdiction of the District Court was pre-empted by that of the National Labor Relations Board under the Labor Management Relations Act 29 U.S.C.A. §§141 et seq. In support of this position, they rely upon these cases: General Drivers Union v. American Tobacco Co., 264 S.W.2d 250 (Ct. Ap. Ky., 1953, modified on rehearing 1954), reversed, 348 U.S. 978 (1955); Kerrigan Iron Works v. Cook Truck Lines, 296 S.W.2d 379 (Ct. Ap. Tenn., 1956), reversed sub nom. Teamsters Local No. 327 v. Kerrigan Iron Works, 353 U.S. 968 (1957); Aladdin Industries v. Associated Transport, 298 S.W. 2d 770 (Ct. Ap. Tenn., 1956), vacated and remanded sub nom. McCrary v. Aladdin Radio Industries, 355 U.S. 8 (1957), see 323 S.W.2d 222 (Ct. Ap. Tenn., 1958) on remand; Jakes Foundry Co. v. Tennessee-

Carolina Trans. Co., 329 S.W.2d 364 (Ct. Ap. Tenn., 1959), reversed sub nom. Bogle v. Jakes Foundry Co.; 362 U.S. 401 (1960). The cited cases are not controlling here. This is an action by a shipper against various common carriers for damages resulting from claimed breach of a common law duty. No union is a party. No union intervened. No unfair labor practice is alleged. No injunction was issued or sought to control the conduct of any union or employer. The absence of any such facts here sufficiently distinguishes the cases relied upon by appellees.

In further proceedings, the District Court can determine to what extent, if any, the common law right has been affected or qualified or supplemented by the Motor Carrier Act, supra, or the Labor Management Relations Act, supra.—either, neither or both. Moreover, if development of the facts should make it appropriate, the District Court can refer or require reference to the Interstate Commerce Commission or the National Labor Relations Board for such aid as may be necessary or useful to that court's ultimate decision. Federal Maritime Board v. Isbrandtsen Co., 356 U.S. 481, 498 (1958); United States v. Western Pacific R. Co., 352 U.S. 59 (1956). See also Hewitt-Robins, supra, p. 85, footnote.

The evidence adduced before the District Court may well disclose a situation where the common law rights of the parties must be balanced in the light of pertinent federal statutes. Indeed, a balance may have to be stricken in measuring the conflicting impacts of apparently conflicting federal statutes upon those common law rights. Resolution may not be easy, but it can best be accomplished after a full airing and consideration of all the facts.

The matter is now accordingly remanded to the District Court for further proceedings consistent with the views expressed above.

(Endorsed). Opinion Filed September 18, 1963.

Frank H. Schmid, Clerk.

SUBJECT INDEX.

	Page
Introduction	1
Opinions of the Supreme Court and of the courts below	2
Questions presented	3
Statutes involved	5
Statement of the case	5
Argument	9
I.
No basis exists for review of the question presented by the instant petition because the holding of the court of appeals that no statutory cause of action arose under the motor carrier act is correct and consistent with prior decisions of this court	9
II.
Having decided in T.I.M.E. that no statutory civil remedy has been created, this court should grant certiorari in this case, not to review that question, but to review the question of the survival of a common law remedy and the other questions presented by the petition of the other carriers	12
Conclusion	14
Appendix A. Labor Management Relations Act (49 U. S. C. §§157, 158)	App. p. 1

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES CITED

Cases	Page
Hewitt-Robins, Incorporated v. Eastern Freight-Ways, Inc. 371 U. S. 84, 9 L. Ed. 2d 142, 83 S. Ct. 157	2, 7, 9, 10, 11, 13, 14
Meier & Pohlman Furniture Co. v. Gibbons, 233 F. 2d 296, cert. den. 352 U. S. 879, 1 L. Ed. 2d 80, 77 S. Ct. 101	9, 10
Merchandise Warehouse Company v. ABC Freight Forwarding Corp., 165 Fed. Supp. 67	10
T.I.M.E. Inc. v. United States, 359 U. S. 464, 3 L. Ed. 2d 952, 79 S. Ct. 904	3, 9, 10, 11, 13, 14
Rules
Rules of the Supreme Court, Rule 19	9
Statutes
Interstate Commerce Act, Part II, Secs. 201-227	5
Interstate Commerce Act, Part II, Sec. 216(b)	5
Interstate Commerce Act, Part II, Sec. 216(d)	5
Labor Management Relations Act, Sec. 7	5
Labor Management Relations Act, Sec. 8	5
Labor Management Relations Act, Secs. 141-187	5
Labor Relations Act, Sec. 7	5
Labor Relations Act, Sec. 8	5
Motor Carrier Act, Sec. 216(j)	5, 11
United States Code, Title 28, Sec. 1331	6
United States Code, Title 28, Sec. 1332	6
United States Code, Title 28, Sec. 1337	6
United States Code, Title 29, Secs. 141-187	5
United States Code, Title 29, Sec. 157	5

Page

United States Code, Title 29, Sec. 158 5
United States Code, Title 49, Secs. 301-327 5
United States Code, Title 49, Sec. 316(b) 5
United States Code, Title 49, Sec. 316(d) 5
United States Code, Title 49, Sec. 316(j) 5, 11
United States Code Annotated, Title 29, Sec. 141 .. 4

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States

October Term, 1963
No. 645

Case No. 17235

PENSICK & GORDON, INC.,
Petitioner

vs.

CALIFORNIA MOTOR EXPRESS, et al.,
Respondents.

Case No. 17380

PENSICK & GORDON, INC., a California corporation,
Petitioner,

vs.

CALIFORNIA MOTOR EXPRESS, LIMITED, a corporation, et al.,
Respondents.

Brief of Respondents Pacific Intermountain Express, a Corporation, and Consolidated Freightways, a Corporation, in Reply to Petition for Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Introduction.

Petitioner, by the Petition for Certiorari herein, seeks review of the decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, on remand, affirming the dismissal of consolidated cases Nos. 17235 and 17380 as to these respondents and other respondents similarly situated, for lack of jurisdiction. Other parties to said consolidated appeals, as to whom the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit reversed dismissals for lack of jurisdiction, have petitioned separately (Docket No. 625, October Term, 1963) for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review that Court's decision.

These Respondents concur in the view that a resolution of the questions presented by that petition is necessary. The questions raised and issues presented by the cross-petitions are so intertwined that it will be necessary to discuss herein both petitions.[1]

Opinions of the Supreme Court and of the Courts Below.

The petition correctly summarizes and appends these opinions except that the opinion of this Court in Hewitt-Robins, Incorporated v. Eastern Freight-Ways, Inc. 371 U. S. 84, 9 L. Ed. 2d 142, 83 S. Ct. 157 (1962), is improperly included under this heading. The opinion of the Court of Appeals on remand [Pet. App. D, pp. 19 et seq.] is reported at 323 F. 2d 769.

---

[1]For purposes of clarity and brevity the following references will be used herein: Respondents Pacific Intermountain Express and Consolidated Freightways will sometimes be referred to as "P.I.E." and "C.F." respectively, and at other times collectively with other respondent parties to the instant petition as "Respondents." Petitioner herein and Respondent in the cross-petition referred to above will on occasion be designated as "Shipper." Petitioners in the cross-petition will be referred to collectively as "Other Carriers." Page references to the printed transcript in cases nos. 17235 and 17380 in the Court below will be preceded by the designation "1 Tr." and "2 Tr." respectively. Page references to the Shipper's petition will be preceded by the designation "Pet." Page references to the petition of the Other Carriers will be preceded by the designation "O.C. Pet." Page references to Shipper's reply to the petition of the other carriers will be preceded by the designation "Shipper's Rep."

Questions Presented.

The immediate question presented by the petition herein is as follows:

Notwithstanding the decision of this Court in T.I.M.E. Inc. v. United States, 359 U. S. 464, 3 L. Ed. 2d 952, 79 S. Ct. 904 (1959), does the District Court have jurisdiction over the subject matter of a shipper's post-shipment claim for damages against an interstate motor carrier arising out of the carrier's alleged unreasonable failure to render pickup and delivery service, where diversity of citizenship between shipper and carrier does not exist.

If the answer to this question were to be in the affirmative, then, of necessity, certain questions raised in the petition of the Other Carriers [O. C. Pet. pp. 3-4] are also presented. These are:

1. Does a post-shipment action for damages predicated upon a claim of a shipper that failure of common carriers by motor vehicle in interstate commerce to render pickup and delivery service across picket lines at shipper's place of business constitutes unjust and unreasonable discrimination in service survive enactment of the Interstate Commerce Act, Part II?[2]

* * * * *

3. Assuming jurisdiction of the District Court over the action, may the District Court seek and the

---

[2] The second question presented in the Other Carriers' petition would not be relevant to Respondent's P.I.E. and C.F. since they are not freight forwarders. It reads as follows:

2. Does a post-shipment action for damages predicated upon a claim of a shipper that failure of freight forwarders in interstate commerce to render pickup and delivery service across picket lines at shipper's place of business constitutes unjust and unreasonable discrimination in service survive enactment of the Interstate Commerce Act, Part IV?

Interstate Commerce Commission give an advisory opinion as to whether the carrier's conduct in failing to provide pickup and delivery service across picket lines constitutes an unjust and unreasonable discrimination in service?

4. Is jurisdiction of the District Court in the particular controversy pre-empted by that of the National Labor Relations Board under the Labor Management Relations Act, 29 U. S. C. A. §§141 et seq.?

5. Assuming jurisdiction of the United States District Court is not so pre-empted, may the District Court seek and the National Labor Relations Board give an advisory opinion as to whether any activity of any person pertinent to the determination of the action is protected or prohibited by the National Labor Relations Act, as amended?

Shipper has conceded that questions 3 and 5 above require resolution and determination by this Court [Rep. pp. 5-6]. Shipper concedes that question 4, above, has not been directly decided by an opinion of this Court and that its determination is required before further proceedings can be had. Shipper further notes that the question is encompassed (though in a form begging it), in question 5 presented by Shipper [Rep. pp. 4-5]. Shipper contends in its reply to the petition of the other carriers, that question 1 does not require any further determination by this Court [Rep. pp. 4-5]. However, in its instant petition, Shipper argues persuasively, contrary to its prior contention, that such a determination is indeed necessary and thereby now concedes that this question also requires determination by this Court [Pet. pp. 13, 16-21].

Statutes Involved.

The petition presents questions of Congressional intent in the enactment of the Interstate Commerce Act, Part II §§201-227 [49 U. S. C. §§301-327] and the Labor Management Relations Act, §§141-187 [29 U. S. C. §§141-187]. Therefore, in some measure, all of each of the above-cited provisions has pertinence. For convenience of reference, these statutes will be referred to in subsequent parts of this brief as the "Motor Carrier Act," and the "Labor Relations Act," respectively. The provisions of these statutes most directly involved are Interstate Commerce Act, Part II, §§216(b), 216(d) and 216(j) [49 U. S. C. §§316(b), (d) and (j)], and Labor Management Relations Act, §§7 and 8 [29 U. S. C. §§157, 158]. The provisions of the Motor Carrier Act are quoted in the petition (Pet. pp. 6-7). Sections 7 and 8 of the Labor Relations Act are reproduced in Appendix A hereto.

Statement of the Case.

This is an action for damages by a shipper against motor carriers predicated upon a claim that the failure of such carriers to provide service in interstate commerce to and from the shipper's place of business constituted unjust and unreasonable discrimination in service. As to these Respondents, the action is brought on the original verified complaint [1 Tr. 4-28]. Initially, Petitioner sought injunctive relief as well but abandoned this position prior to the hearing upon Respondents' motions to dismiss. The material facts are disclosed by Petitioner's verified complaint and by affidavits properly before the district court submitted by Petitioner and various defendants in the action, including Respondents herein. Initially, Petitioner asserted jurisdiction in the United States District Court under 28 U. S. C. §1332 and 28 U. S. C. §1337[3], but now concedes that as to Respondents herein, including P.I.E. and C.F., diversity of citizenship could not be shown.

Shipper, a wholesale distributor of toys, sells its merchandise to retail stores throughout the Western United States and regularly and customarily calls upon common carriers, including P.I.E. and C.F., to deliver merchandise to it and to pick up merchandise consigned by it to its customers [1 Tr. 5, 6, 59-61; 2 Tr. 2d-e], Respondents P.I.E. and C.F. are common carriers of property by motor vehicle in interstate commerce operating under certificates of public convenience and necessity issued to them pursuant to the Motor Carrier Act [1 Tr. 5, 75, 83].

Commencing on October 12, 1960, and continuing thereafter on October 13, 14, 17 and 18, 1960, there was a strike of Shipper's employees and the Teamsters union maintained a picket line at petitioner's place of business [1 Tr. 40, 42, 174-175; see also 2 Tr. 80-81, 86]. Driver employees of P.I.E. and C.F. and of other common carriers who were members of the Teamsters union [1 Tr. 79, 89] refused to cross from the public streets through the Teamster picket line to accomplish pick-up or delivery of shipments at the loading platform on Shipper's premises. The only known instances where either P.I.E. or C.F. allegedly failed to serve Shipper occurred solely as a result of said refusal of drivers to cross the picket line, despite instructions from said Respondents to do so [1 Tr. 42, 77, 80, 84-88].

[3] In its petition Shipper appears to be relying on 28 U. S. C. §1331 (Pet. p. 5); this basis for jurisdiction was not advanced either on the pleadings or in any of the prior proceedings in this Court of the Court of Appeals [e.g., 1 Tr. 4; 2 Tr. 2a].

The District Court dismissed the action [1 Tr. 94] upon motions by Respondents P.I.E. and C.F. and other common carrier defendants made on the ground that the District Court was without jurisdiction both under the Motor Carrier Act and the Labor Relations Act, and because of absence of diversity of citizenship [1 Tr. 43-45, 72-73]. Shipper appealed [1 Tr. 95] and filed its First Amended Complaint, alleging diversity of citizenship specifically as to the defendants named therein, and deleting Respondents herein, including P.I.E. and C.F., as to whom diversity of citizenship could not be shown [2 Tr. 2-2h]. The action was again dismissed by the District Court, upon motion of the Other Carriers made on the ground that the District Court was without jurisdiction under the Motor Carrier Act and the Labor Relations Act [2 Tr. 192, 55; 82]. Shipper appealed again [2 Tr. 194] and the two appeals were consolidated for consideration and decision.

In its first opinion the Court of Appeals held that the Motor Carrier Act did not create a statutory cause of action cognizable in the federal courts and that survival of a common-law action would be inconsistent with that Act's statutory purpose. The effect upon jurisdiction of the Labor Relations Act was not decided.

This Court granted certiorari and, in a per curiam opinion, remanded the case to the Court of Appeals for further consideration in light of the decision in Hewitt-Robins, Inc. v. Eastern Freight-Ways, Inc., 371 U. S. 84, 9 L. Ed. 2d 142, 83 S. Ct. 157 (1962).

In its opinion on remand, review of which is sought by the instant Petition and the Petition filed by the Other Carriers, the Court of Appeals affirmed the holding in its first opinion that the Motor Carrier Act creates no statutory cause of action cognizable in the federal courts, and further held: (1) that the complaint states a common law cause of action which survives passage of the Motor Carrier Act; (2) that jurisdiction of the District Court is not pre-empted by that of the National Labor Relations Board under the Labor Relations Act; (3) that the District Court can determine to what extent, if any, the common law has been affected or qualified by the Motor Carrier Act or the Labor Relations Act or both; and (4) that the District Court can refer or require reference to the Interstate Commerce Commission or the National Labor Relations Board for such aid as may be necessary or useful to the Court's ultimate decision.

ARGUMENT.

I.

No Basis Exists for Review of the Question Presented by the Instant Petition Because the Holding of the Court of Appeals That No Statutory Cause of Action Arose Under the Motor Carrier Act Is Correct and Consistent With Prior Decisions of This Court.

The court below refused to read Hewitt-Robins, Inc. v. Eastern Freight-Ways, Inc., 371 U. S. 84; 9 L. Ed. 2d 142; 83 S. Ct. 157 (1962) as holding that the Motor Carrier Act created a statutory cause of action cognizable in the federal courts in the first instance, inasmuch as it considered only the survival of the common law right there involved and did not purport to change the prior holding of this court in T.I.M.E., Inc. v. United States, 359 U. S. 464, 3 L. Ed. 2d 952, 79 S. Ct. 904 (1959). Accordingly, it held that further proceedings in the District Court should be limited to Shipper and the other carriers as to whom diversity of citizenship exists. No diversity exists as to these respondents, who were party only to case No. 17235 in the court below [Pet. p. 8].

Referring to criteria enunciated in Rule 19, petitioner argues for the allowance of the writ, as follows:

(a) First, petitioner contends that the decision below contravenes the "teaching" of Hewitt-Robins, and conflicts with a decision of the Eighth Circuit and a decision in the Southern District of Indiana [Pet. p. 14]. In respect to the latter contention,[4] the lower court cases referred to, Meier & Pohlman Furniture

[4]The former contention will be considered in sub-point (b), infra.

Co. v. Gibbons, 233 F. 2d 296 (8th Cir. 1956), cert. den. 352 U. S. 879, 1 L. Ed. 2d 80, 77 S. Ct. 101 (1956), and Merchandise Warehouse Company v. ABC Freight Forwarding Corp., 165 Fed. Supp. 67 (S. D. Ind., 1958), both antedate T.I.M.E., and to the extent that they conflict with it must be deemed to have been overruled. Moreover, the existence of a statutory remedy cognizable in the federal courts absent diversity of citizenship was not considered in either of these cases. In Meier & Pohlman Furniture Co., it does not appear that the jurisdiction of the court was questioned, and the formal finding of jurisdiction is supported by no citation of authority. In Merchandise Warehouse Company, the District Court dealt directly with the merits of the case after noting that objections to jurisdiction had been defectively presented.

(b) Next, petitioner contends that the court below misapplied decisions of this court [Pet. pp. 15-17]. Petitioner's first contention in this regard is that the existence of a statutory as well as a common law remedy may be predicated upon the holding in Hewitt-Robins; Its second contention comprises a statement of the claimed anomalous consequences of the decisions in T.I.M.E. and in Hewitt-Robins, taken together.

Petitioner's argument based upon Hewitt-Robins, urged in various forms throughout its petition, is, in substance, that since that decision postulates the survival of common-law rights in certain factual situations involving Motor Carriers, the provisions of the Motor Carrier Act applicable to those situations must be read to create statutory causes of action as well. There is nothing to this effect in Hewitt-Robins. Rather, as the court below pointed out in response to this same contention, Hewitt-Robins considered only the survival of the common-law right there involved. No other matters were before the Court for decision. Petitioner's argument as to the "teaching" of Hewitt-Robins seemingly assumes that in that case, the square holding in Part I of T.I.M.E. was overruled, on a matter not even before the Court, and neither necessary nor appropriate to its decision. This assumption is plainly unwarranted.

There is no inconsistency between the existence of a common law remedy and the absence of a statutory federal remedy. The claimed anomaly, as petitioner itself notes, arises out of the holding of the Court below that a common law remedy survived but may have "been affected or qualified or supplemented by the Motor Carrier Act" (323 F. 2d at 771). Any such effect, qualification or supplementation could arise only out of an inconsistency between the common law action and the Motor Carrier Act, in the face of the clear Congressional intent that inconsistent common law remedies be abrogated [Motor Carrier Act, Section 216(j), 49 U. S. C. §316(j)].

The inconsistency would not be cured by the existence of a statutory remedy unless the common law remedy and the statutory remedy were consistent without any change in the common law remedy dictated by the statutory remedy. T.I.M.E. holds that no statutory remedy exists, and Hewitt-Robins in no way affects that holding. Inquiry, therefore, must be directed at the underlying assumption that a common law remedy has survived [Point II, infra].

II.

Having Decided in T.I.M.E. That No Statutory Civil Remedy Has Been Created, This Court Should Grant Certiorari in This Case, Not to Review That Question, But to Review the Question of the Survival of a Common Law Remedy and the Other Questions Presented by the Petition of the Other Carriers.

Shipper and the Other Carriers agree that the case presents several important questions of federal law for review upon certiorari which have not been, but should be settled by this Court. These Respondents concur in this view, even though, by virtue of the correct holding of the court below that no statutory remedy exists, the dismissal of the case as to these respondents would not be affected by the determination of these questions. These respondents operate in numerous states, and, like all other carriers operating in more than one state, are vitally interested in the resolution of these issues.

We agree that the questions presented for review are those set forth by the Other Carriers in their petition (see Questions Presented, supra) and not those formulated by Shipper in its reply to that petition and in the petition herein.

Shipper expressly agrees that questions 3 and 5 should be reviewed by this court [Rep. pp. 5-6].

The question whether jurisdiction of the District Court is pre-empted by the National Labor Relations Board (question 4) has been answered affirmatively in per curiam decisions of this court in cases brought under common law—the only cause of action upheld by the court below in this proceeding. Shipper contends that these per curiam decisions do not lead to that result, and that therefore the contrary holding in the Court of Appeals is correct [Rep. pp. 5, 8-10; see Pet. pp. 20-21]. Be that as it may, it is obvious that all parties agree this vital issue requires resolution by this court [O. C. Pet. 17-23].

As to the issue whether a common-law cause of action survived the adoption of the Motor Carrier Act (question No. 1), Shipper has taken inherently inconsistent positions. In its reply to the petition of the Other Carriers [Rep. pp. 6-8], Shipper contends that the decision of the Court of Appeals in this regard is perfectly consistent with the decisions of this court and that review is therefore unnecessary. In the instant petition, however, Shipper recognizes the far-reaching and anomalous consequences of that holding, none of which, as it concedes, have been passed upon by this court. The anomaly which petitioner perceives does not, as we have shown above, call into question the absence of any statutory remedy, but it does cast serious doubt upon the survival of the common-law remedy. At the very least, it may be said that this court did not decide either in T.I.M.E. or in Hewitt-Robins that common-law remedies can be saved from extinction by reason of inconsistency with the statutory scheme by virtue of being affected, modified or qualified by the Motor Carrier Act. On the contrary, T.I.M.E. did decide that a common-law remedy inconsistent with the statutory scheme did not survive, and in Hewitt-Robins the common law remedy was held to have survived because it was consistent with the statutory scheme. In holding that the common-law remedy survived without deciding whether or not it was consistent with the statutory scheme, the Court of Appeals decided this question in a manner which is in conflict with the decisions in T.I.M.E. and in Hewitt-Robins.

Conclusion.

For the reasons hereinabove set forth, this Court should refuse to review the questions presented by Shipper in this petition and should grant certiorari to review the questions presented in the petition of the Other Carriers.

Respectfully Submitted,

HARRY J. KEATON,
Attorney for Respondents Pacific Intermountain Express, a Corporation, and Consolidated Frightways, a Corporation.

LOEB and LOEB,
ROBERT A. HOLTZMAN,
Of Counsel.

APPENDIX A.

Labor Management Relations Act.

(49 U. S. C. §§157, 158)

§157. Right of employees as to organization, collective bargaining, etc.

Employees shall have the right to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection, and shall also have the right to refrain from any or all of such activities except to the extent that such right may be affected by an agreement requiring membership in a labor organization as a condition of employment as authorized in section 158(a)(3) of this title.

§158. Unfair labor practices

(a) It shall be an unfair labor practice for an employer—

(1) to interfere with, restrain, or coerce employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in section 157 of this title;

(2) to dominate or interfere with the formation or administration of any labor organization or contribute financial or other support to it; PROVIDED, That subject to rules and regulations made and published by the Board pursuant to section 156 of this title, an employer shall not be prohibited from permitting employees to confer with him during working hours without loss of time or pay;

(3) by discrimination in regard to hire or tenure of employment or any term or condition of employment to encourage or discourage membership in any labor organization: PROVIDED, that nothing in this subchapter, or in any other statute of the United States, shall preclude an employer from making an agreement with a labor organization (not established, maintained, or assisted by any action defined in this subsection as an unfair labor practice) to require as a condition of employment membership therein on or after the thirtieth day following the beginning of such employment or the effective date of such agreement, whichever is the later, (i) if such labor organization is the representative of the employees as provided in section 159(a) of this title, in the appropriate collective-bargaining unit covered by such agreement when made, and (ii) unless following an election held as provided in section 159 (e) of this title within one year preceding the effective date of such agreement, the Board shall have certified that at least a majority of the employees eligible to vote in such election have voted to rescind the authority of such labor organization to make such an agreement: PROVIDED FURTHER, That no employer shall justify any discrimination against an employee for nonmembership in a labor organization (A) if he has reasonable grounds for believing that such membership was not available to the employee on the same terms and conditions generally applicable to other members, or (B) if he has reasonable grounds for believing that membership was denied or terminated for reasons other than the failure of the employee to tender the periodic dues and the initiation fees uniformly required as a condition of acquiring or retaining membership;

(4) to discharge or otherwise discriminate against an employee because he has filed charges or given testimony under this subchapter;

(5) to refuse to bargain collectively with the representatives of his employees, subject to the provisions of section 159(a) of this title.

(b) It shall be an unfair labor practice for a labor organization or its agents—

(1) to restrain or coerce (A) employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in section 157 of this title: PROVIDED, That this paragraph shall not impair the right of a labor organization to prescribe its own rules with respect to the acquisition or retention of membership therein; or (B) an employer in the selection of his representatives for the purposes of collective bargaining or the adjustment of grievances;

(2) to cause or attempt to cause an employer to discriminate against an employee in violation of subsection (a) (3) of this section or to discriminate against an employee with respect to whom membership in such organization has been denied or terminated on some ground other than his failure to tender the periodic dues and the initiation fees uniformly required as a condition of acquiring or retaining membership;

(3) to refuse to bargain collectively with an employer, provided it is the representative of his employees subject to the provisions of section 159(a) of this title;

(4) (i) to engage in, or to induce or encourage any individual employed by any person engaged in commerce or in an industry affecting commerce to engage in, a strike or a refusal in the course of his employment to use, manufacture, process, transport, or otherwise handle or work on any good, articles, materials, or commodities or to perform any services; or (ii) to threaten, coerce, or restrain any person engaged in commerce or in an industry affecting commerce, where in either case an object thereof is—

(A) forcing or requiring any employer or self-employed person to join any labor or employer organization or to enter into any agreement which is prohibited by subsection (e) of this section;

(B) forcing or requiring any person to cease using, selling, handling, transporting, or otherwise dealing in the products of any other producer, processor, or manufacturer, or to cease doing business with any other person, or forcing or requiring any other employer to recognize or bargain with a labor organization as the representative of his employees unless such labor organization has been certified as the representative of such employees under the provisions of section 159 of this title: Provided, That nothing contained in this clause (B) shall be construed to make unlawful, where not otherwise unlawful, any primary strike or primary picketing;

(C) forcing or requiring any employer to recognize or bargain with a particular labor organization as the representative of his employees if another labor organization has been certified as the representative of such employees under the provisions of section 159 of this title;

(D) forcing or requiring any employer to assign particular work to employees in a particular labor organization or in a particular trade, craft, or class rather than to employees in another labor organization or in another trade, craft, or class, unless such employer is failing to conform to an order or certification of the Board determining the bargaining representative for employees performing such work:

Provided, That nothing contained in this subsection shall be construed to make unlawful a refusal by any person to enter upon the premises of any employer (other than his own employer), if the employees of such employer are engaged in a strike ratified or approved by a representative of such employees whom such employer is required to recognize under this subchapter: Provided further, That for the purposes of this paragraph (4) only, nothing contained in such paragraph shall be construed to prohibit publicity, other than picketing, for the purpose of truthfully advising the public, including consumers and members of a labor organization, that a product or products are produced by an employer with whom the labor organization has a primary dispute and are distributed by another employer, as long as such publicity does not have an effect of inducing any individual employed by any person other than the primary employer in the course of his employment to refuse to pick up, deliver, or transport any goods, or not to perform any services, at the establishment of the employer engaged in such distribution;

(5) to require of employees covered by an agreement authorized under subsection (a) (3) of this section the payment, as a condition precedent to becoming a member of such organization, of a fee in an amount which the Board finds excessive or discriminatory under all the circumstances. In making such a finding, the Board shall consider, among other relevant factors, the practices and customs of labor organizations in the particular industry, and the wages currently paid to the employees affected;

(6) to cause or attempt to cause an employer to pay or deliver or agree to pay or deliver any money or other thing of value, in the nature of an exaction, for services which are not performed or not to be performed; and

(7) to picket or cause to be picketed, or threaten to picket or cause to be picketed, any employer where an object thereof is forcing or requiring an employer to recognize or bargain with a labor organization as the representative of his employees, or forcing or requiring the employees of an employer to accept or select such labor organization as their collective bargaining representative, unless such labor organization is currently certified as the representative of such employees:

(A) where the employer has lawfully recognized in accordance with this subchapter any other labor organization and a question concerning representation may not appropriately be raised under section 159(c) of this title,

(B) where within the preceding twelve months a valid election under section 159(c) of this title has been conducted, or

(C) where such picketing has been conducted without a petition under section 159(c) of this title being filed within a reasonable period of time not to exceed thirty days from the commencement of such picketing: Provided, That when such a petition has been filed the Board shall forthwith, without regard to the provisions of section 159(c)(1) of this title or the absence of a showing of a substantial interest on the part of the labor organization, direct an election in such unit as the Board finds to be appropriate and shall certify the results

thereof: Provided further, That nothing in this subparagraph (C) shall be construed to prohibit any picketing or other publicity for the purpose of truthfully advising the public (including consumers) that an employer does not employ members of, or have a contract with, a labor organization, unless an effect of such picketing is to induce any individual employed by any other person in the course of his employment, not to pick up, deliver or transport any goods or not to perform any services.

Nothing in this paragraph (7) shall be construed to permit any act which would otherwise be an unfair labor practice under this subsection

(c) The expressing of any views, argument, or opinion, or the dissemination thereof, whether in written, printed, graphic, or visual form, shall not constitute or be evidence of an unfair labor practice under any of the provisions of this subchapter, if such expression contains no threat of reprisal or force or promise of benefit.

(d) For the purposes of this section, to bargain collectively is the performance of the mutual obligation of the employer and the representative of the employees to meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith with respect to wages, hours, and other terms and conditions of employment, or the negotiation of an agreement, or any question arising thereunder, and the execution of a written contract incorporating any agreement reached if requested by either party, but such obligation does not compel either party to agree to a proposal or require the making of a concession: PROVIDED, That where there is in effect a collective-bargaining contract covering employees in an industry affecting commerce, the duty to bargain collectively shall also mean that no party to such contract shall terminate or modify such contract, unless the party desiring such termination or modification—

(1) serves a written notice upon the other party to the contract of the proposed termination or modification sixty days prior to the expiration date thereof, or in the event such contract contains no expiration date, sixty days prior to the time it is proposed to make such termination or modification;

(2) offers to meet and confer with the other party for the purpose of negotiating a new contract or a contract containing the proposed modifications;

(3) notifies the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service within thirty days after such notice of the existence of a dispute, and simultaneously therewith notifies any State or Territorial agency established to mediate and conciliate disputes within the State or Territory where the dispute occurred, provided no agreement has been reached by that time; and

(4) continues in full force and effect, without resorting to strike or lock-out, all the terms and conditions of the existing contract for a period of sixty days after such notice is given or until the expiration date of such contract, whichever occurs later: The duties imposed upon employers, employees, and labor organizations by paragraphs (2)-(4) of this subsection shall become inapplicable upon an intervening certification of the Board, under which the labor organization or individual, which is a party to the contract, has been superseded as or ceased to be the representative of the employees subject to the provisions of section 159(a) of this title, and the duties so imposed shall not be construed as requiring either party to discuss or agree to any modification of the terms and conditions contained in a contract for a fixed period, if such modification is to become effective before such terms and conditions can be reopened under the provisions of the contract. Any employee who engages in a strike within the sixty-day period specified in this subsection shall lose his status as an employee of the employer engaged in the particular labor dispute, for the purposes of sections 158-160 of this title, but such loss of status for such employee shall terminate if and when he is reemployed by such employer.

(e) It shall be an unfair labor practice for any labor organization and any employer to enter into any contract or agreement, express or implied, whereby such employer ceases or refrains or agrees to cease or refrain from handling, using, selling, transporting or otherwise dealing in any of the products of any other employer, or to cease doing business with any other person, and any contract or agreement entered into heretofore or hereafter containing such an agreement shall be to such extent unenforcible and void: Provided, That nothing in this subsection shall apply to an agreement between a labor organization and an employer in the construction industry relating to the contracting or subcontracting of work to be done at the site of the construction, alteration, painting, or repair of a building, structure, or other work: Provided further, That for the purpose of this subsection and subsection (b)-(4)-(B) of this section the terms "any employer," "any person engaged in commerce or an industry affecting commerce," and "any person" when used in relation to the terms "any other producer, processor, or manufacturer," "any other employer," or "any other person" shall not include persons in the relation of a jobber, manufacturer, contractor, or subcontractor working on the goods or premises of the jobber or manufacturer or performing parts of an integrated process of production in the apparel and clothing industry: Provided further, That nothing in this subchapter shall prohibit the enforcement of any agreement which is within the foregoing exception.

(f) It shall not be an unfair labor practice under subsections (a) and (b) of this section for an employer engaged primarily in the building and construction industry to make an agreement covering employees engaged (or who, upon their employment, will be engaged) in the building and construction industry with a labor organization of which building and construction employees are members (not established, maintained, or assisted by any action defined in subsection (a) of this section as an unfair labor practice) because (1) the majority status of such labor organization has not been established under the provisions of section 159 of this title prior to the making of such agreement, or (2) such agreement requires as a condition of employment, membership in such labor organization after the seventh day following the beginning of such employment or the effective date of the agreement, whichever is later, or (3) such agreement requires the employer to notify such labor organization of opportunities for employment with such employer, or gives such labor organization an opportunity to refer qualified applicants for such employment, or (4) shall agreement specifies minimum training or experience qualifications for employment or provides for priority in opportunities for employment based upon length of service with such employer, in the industry of in the particular geographical area: Provided, That nothing in this subsection shall set aside the final proviso to subsection (a)(3) of this section: Provided further, That any agreement which would be invalid, but for clause (1) of this subsection, shall not be a bar to a petition filed pursuant to section 159(c) or 159(e) of this title.

SUBJECT INDEX

	Page
Opinion of the Supreme Court and of the courts below	2
Jurisdiction	2
Questions presented	2
Statutes involved	4
Statement of the case	5
Argument	9
A. Reply to petitioner's contentions that this court should review the holding of the court of appeals that the District Court had no jurisdiction under 28 U. S. C. § 1337	9
B. Comment of respondent with respect to the contentions of the petitioner that the court of appeals on remand has decided questions of federal law which have not, but should be, settled by this court	12
C. Conclusion	15
Appendix A. Interstate Commerce Act	App. p. 1
Labor Management Relations Act (49 U. S. C. §§157, 158)	App. p. 2

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES CITED

Cases

Braswell Motor Freight Lines, Inc., et al. v. Pensick & Gordon, Inc. October Term, 1963, No. 625, Case No. 17380 ..... 8, 12, 15

Hewitt-Robins, Inc. v. Eastern Freightways, Inc., 371 U. S. 84, 9 L. ed 2d 142, 83 S. Ct. 157 ..... 7, 9, 10, 11

Meier & Pohlman Furniture Co. v. Gibbons, 233 F. 2d 296 9

Merchandise Warehouse Co. v. ABC Freight Forwarder Corp., 165 Fed. Supp. 67 9

T.I.M.E., Inc. v. United States, 359 U. S. 464 9, 10, 11

Statutes

Interstate Commerce Act, Part I, Sec. 8 10

Interstate Commerce Act, Part I, Sec. 9 10

Interstate Commerce Act, Part II, Secs. 201-227 4

Interstate Commerce Act, Part II, Sec. 216(b) 2, 3, 5, 6, 10

Interstate Commerce Act, Part II, Sec. 216(d) 2, 3, 5, 6, 10

Interstate Commerce Act, Part II, Sec. 216(j) 5, 11

Interstate Commerce Act, Part IV, Secs. 401-422 4

Interstate Commerce Act, Part IV, Sec. 404(a) 3, 5

Interstate Commerce Act, Part IV, Sec. 404(b) 3, 5

Labor Management Relations Act, Sec. 7 5

Labor Management Relations Act, Sec. 8..... 5

United States Code, Title 28, Sec. 1332 6

United States Code, Title 28, Sec. 1337 .....6, 10

Page

United States Code, Title 29, Secs. 141-187 5

United States Code Annotated, Title 29, Sec. 141 4

United States Code Annotated, Title 29, Secs. 157-158 5

United States Code Annotated, Title 49, Secs. 301-307 4

United States Code Annotated, Title 49, Sec. 316(b) 2, 3, 5

United States Code Annotated, Title 49, Sec. 316(d) 3, 5

United States Code Annotated, Title 49, Sec. 316(j) 5

United States Code Annotated, Title 49, Secs. 1001-1022 4

United States Code Annotated, Title 49, Sec. 1004-(a) 3, 5

United States Code Annotated, Title 49, Sec. 1004-(b) 3, 5

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States

October Term 1963
No. 645

Case No. 17235

PENSICK & GORDON, INC.,

Petitioner,

vs.

CALIFORNIA MOTOR EXPRESS, et al.,

Respondents.

Case No. 17380

PENSICK & GORDON, INC., a California corporation,

Petitioner,

vs.

CALIFORNIA MOTOR EXPRESS, LIMITED, a corporation, et al.,

Respondents.

Brief of Respondents California Motor Express, Ltd., Delta Lines, Inc., Desert Express, Merchants Express of California, Valley Motor Lines, Inc., and Western Truck Lines, Ltd., Appellees No. 17235, and Braswell Motor Freight Lines, Inc., Denver Chicago Trucking Co., Inc., Hopper Truck Lines, Illinois-California Express, Inc., Universal Carloading & Distributing Co., Inc., Republic Carloading & Distributing Co., Inc., National Carloading Corporation, Western Carloading Co., and Acme Fast Freight, Inc., Appellees No. 17380.

In Reply to Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Opinion of the Supreme Court and of the Courts Below.

The opinions of the Court of Appeals in these causes are reported in 302 F. 2d 391 (April, 1962) and 323 F. 2d 769 (September, 1963). The causes have been the subject of prior opinion by the Supreme Court reported at 371 U. S. 184, 9 L. Ed. 2d 227, 83 S. Ct. 265 (1962). Opinions of the Court of Appeals above described are reproduced as Appendix A and Appendix D of the Petition. The prior opinion of this Court is reproduced as Appendix C of the Petition.

These respondents who are parties to Case No. 17380 filed a Petition for Writ of Certiorari entitled Braswell Motor Freight Lines, Inc., et al. v. Pensick & Gordon, Inc., October Term, 1963, No. 625, seeking review of the decision of the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Jurisdiction.

Respondents concur with the Statement of Petitioners as to jurisdiction of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals. The jurisdiction of the District Court to hear and determine the controversies is the matter at issue in both No. 17235 and No. 17380.

Questions Presented.

These Respondents are dissatisfied with the statement of the questions as presented by the Petitioner.

The Court of Appeals has approved the action of the District Court dismissing the cause as to all defendants in Case No. 17235; therefore, the only question presented in that case is:

> Do Sections 216(b) and (d) of the Interstate Commerce Act, Part II (49 U.S.C.A. §§ 316(b) and (d) establish a private legal right in a shipper, justiciable in the District Court, for the reparation of injury allegedly resulting from past unreasonable and unjust discrimination in service by motor common carriers in interstate commerce?

Respondents submit that the questions presented by the decision of the Court of Appeals as it relates to the Respondents who are parties to Case No. 17380 are these:

1. Do Sections 216(b) and (d) of the Interstate Commerce Act, Part II (49 U. S. C. A. §§316-(b) and (d)) establish a private legal right in a shipper, justiciable in the District Court, for the reparation of injury allegedly resulting from past unreasonable and unjust discrimination in service by motor common carriers in interstate commerce?
2. Do Sections 404(a) and (b) of the Interstate Commerce Act, Part IV (49 U. S. C. A. §§1004(a) and (b)) establish a private legal right in a shipper, justiciable in the District Court, for the reparation of injury allegedly resulting from past unreasonable and unjust discrimination in service by freight forwarders in interstate commerce?
3. Does a post-shipment action for damages predicated upon a claim of a shipper that failure of common carriers by motor vehicle in interstate commerce to render pickup and delivery service across picket lines at shipper's place of business constitutes unjust and unreasonable discrimination in service survive enactment of the Interstate Commerce Act Part II?

4. Does a post-shipment action for damages predicated upon a claim of a shipper that failure of freight forwarders in interstate commerce to render pickup and delivery service across picket lines at shipper's place of business constitutes unjust and unreasonable discrimination in service survive enactment of the Interstate Commerce Act, Part IV?

5. Assuming jurisdiction of the District Court over the action, may the District Court seek and the Interstate Commerce Commission give an advisory opinion as to whether the carrier's conduct in failing to provide pickup and delivery service across picket lines constitutes an unjust and unreasonable discrimination in service?

6. In jurisdiction of the District Court in the particular controversy pre-empted by that of the National Labor Relations Board under the Labor Management Relations Act, 29 U. S. C. A. §§141 et seq.?

7. Assuming jurisdiction of the United States District Court is not so pre-empted, may the District Court see and the National Labor Relations Board give an advisory opinion as to whether any activity of any person pertinent to the determination of the action is protected or prohibited by the National Labor Relations Act as amended?

Statutes Involved.

"The petition presents questions of the Congressional intent in the enactment of the Interstate Commerce Act, Part II Sections 201-227 (49 U. S. C. A. §§301-307) Interstate Commerce Act, Part IV Sections 401-422 (49 U. S. C. A. §§1001-1022 and the Labor Management Relations Act, (29 U. S. C. §§141-187). Therefore, in some measure, all of each of the above cited provisions has pertinence. For convenience of reference these statutes will be referred to in subsequent parts of the Petition of this reply as the "Motor Carrier Act," the "Freight Forwarder Act" and the "Labor Management Act," respectively. Provisions of these statutes most directly involved are Interstate Commerce Act, Part II, Sections 216(b), 216(d) and 216(j); U. S. C. A. §§316(b) (d) and (j)), Interstate Commerce Act, Part IV, Sections 404(a), 404(b), (49 U. S. C. A. §§1004(a) (b)) and Labor Management Relations Act, Sections 7 and 8 (29 U. S. C. A. §§157, 158). Interstate Commerce Act, Part II, Sections 216(b), 216(d) and 216(j) are reproduced at pages 6 and 7 of the Petition and will not, therefore, be restated here. Interstate Commerce Act, Part IV Sections 404(a), 404(b) and Labor Management Relations Act Sections 7 and 8 are reproduced herein as Appendix A hereof.

Statement of the Case.

Respondents cannot agree with Petitioner's statement of the case. Set forth below is a revised statement which Respondents believe to be more accurate and complete than that set forth in the Petition.

Plaintiff, a wholesale distributor of toys, sells its merchandise to retailers throughout Western United States. Plaintiff regularly and customarily calls upon common carriers to make pickup and delivery of property at plaintiff's location moving in interstate Commerce [1 Tr. 5, 6[1]]. For seven days in October, 1960, there was a strike of plaintiff's employees during which the Teamsters Union maintained a picket line at plaintiff's place of business [1 Tr. 40, 42, 174; 2 Tr. 80, 86]. Driver employees of the Respondents (and other common carriers), members of the Teamsters, declined to pass from public streets through the picket line to accomplish pickup or delivery of shipments at the loading platform on plaintiff's premises [1 Tr. 28-30, 40-41, 65-66; Tr. 78-79, 80-82]. All other aspects of carrier service were performed as requested.

[1]References are to Volume and Pages of the Transcript of Record. "1 Tr." refers to Transcript in Case No. 17235, "2 Tr." refers to Transcript in Case No. 17380.

The action is for damages predicated upon the claim that the failure of Respondents to accomplish pickup or delivery across picket lines during the strike period constitutes unjust and unreasonable discrimination in service by common carriers.

Those Respondents who are named in the original complaint and are parties in Case No. 17235 are all common carriers by motor vehicle under the Motor Carrier Act. Diversity not existing, jurisdiction as to them is claimed solely upon the basis of 28 U. S. C. §1337 on the premise that Motor Carrier Act, Sections 204(b) and (d) authorize a court action for damages for past unjust and unreasonable discriminations in service.

Jurisdiction is claimed as to the Respondents named in the amended complaint (the parties to Case No. 17380) under 28 U. S. C. §1337 and also on the additional grounds of diversity under 28 U. S. C. §1332 on the premise that a common law action for damages for past unjust and unreasonable discriminations in service survives passage of Parts II and IV of the Interstate Commerce Act.

The action was dismissed on both the original and amended complaints after motions of the defendants who are common carriers by motor vehicle challenging jurisdiction of the District Court both under the Motor Carrier Act and the Labor Management Relations Act. Plaintiff took separate Appeals from the orders of dismissal as to defendants named in the original and amended complaints. The cases were consolidated for consideration and decision by the Court of Appeals.

In its first opinion the Court of Appeals held the Motor Carrier Act did not create a statutory cause of action cognizable in the Federal courts and that survival of a common law action would be inconsistent with that Act's statutory purposes. The effect of the Labor Management Relations Act upon jurisdiction was not passed upon.

After grant of writ of certiorari, this Court, in a per curiam opinion, remanded the case to the Court of Appeals for further consideration in light of the decision in Hewitt-Robins, Inc. v. Eastern Freightways, Inc., 371 U. S. 84, 9 L. ed. 2d 142, 83 S. Ct. 157 (1962).

In its opinion on remand the Court of Appeals has held as follows:

(1) That the first complaint, grounded in claimed violations of statutory right, was properly dismissed for lack of jurisdiction;

(2) That the Amended Complaint states a common law cause of action which survives passage of the Motor Carrier Act;

(3) That jurisdiction of the District Court is not preempted by that of the National Labor Relations Board under the Labor Management Relations Act;

(4) That the District Court can determine to what extent, if any, the common law right has been affected or qualified by the Motor Carrier Act or the Labor Relations Act; and

(5) That the District Court can refer or require references to the Interstate Commerce Commission or the National Labor Relations Board for such aid as may be necessary or useful to the Court's ultimate decision.

In Braswell Motor Freight Lines, Inc., et al v. Pensick & Gordon, Inc. October Term, 1963, No. 625, the Respondents who are parties to Case No. 17380 seek review of the holdings of the Court of Appeals on remand set forth in (2) through (5) above. Herein, Pensick & Gordon, Inc. seeks review of holdings (1), (4) and (5). Thus, all parties agree that review of the decision of the Court of Appeals is required and as to some of the holdings which should be considered on such review. Petitioner and Respondents differ only as to which of the remaining holdings it is necessary or appropriate for this Court to consider upon such review.

ARGUMENT.

A. Reply to Petitioner's Contentions That This Court Should Review the Holding of the Court of Appeals That the District Court Had No Jurisdiction Under 28 U. S. C. § 1337.

On remand the Court of Appeals confirmed its prior holding that the Motor Carrier Act does not create a statutory cause of action for damages for past discriminations in service. Dismissal as to all defendants who are parties to Case No. 17235 was, therefore, affirmed. This holding of the Court of Appeals was predicated upon the decision of this Court in T.I.M.E., Inc. v. United States, 359 U. S. 464 (1959) and the determination that Hewitt-Robins, Inc. v. Eastern Freight-Ways, Inc., 371 U. S. 84 (1962) did not change the holding in T.I.M.E., Inc.

In support of the contention that the above described holding of the Court of Appeals should be reviewed the Petitioner urges: (1) that the decision is in conflict with decisions in other Circuits; and, (2) that there has been a misapplication of decisions of this Court.

The cases relied upon by Petition as establishing a conflict in decisions of Courts of Appeals are Meier & Pohlman Furniture Co. v. Gibbons 233 F. 2d 296, decided by the Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit in 1956, and Merchandise Warehouse Co. v. ABC Freight Forwarder Corp., 165 Fed. Supp. 67, a 1958 decision of a District Court in the Southern District of Indiana. Both cases antedate the decision of this Court in T.I.M.E., Inc.. supra. Therefore, any such conflict as these earlier decisions might otherwise have created has already been resolved by this Court. In reality, neither of the cases cited by Petitioner is in conflict with the challenged holding of the Court of Appeals in the case here involved. True, in each of the cases there is a declaration of jurisdiction in a federal district court predicated upon the assumption of the existence of a statutory right. However, in both cases the said right was presumed to exist without critical analysis and without any consideration of the Congressional intent and purpose in enactment of the Motor Carrier Act. Premises considered, no basis exists for review predicated on conflict in decisions of Courts of Appeals.

The contention of the Petitioner that in holding the District Court does not have jurisdiction under 28 U. S. C. §1337 the Court of Appeals has misapplied decisions of this Court is also without merit.

The burden of Petitioner's argument appears to be that, since the Court of Appeals has held survival of a common law action is not inconsistent with the statutory purpose on authority of Hewitt-Robins, Inc., it must also follow that T.I.M.E., Inc. cannot properly be held controlling on the issue of the existence of a statutory right of action.

In T.I.M.E., Inc., this Court held that Sections 216(b) and (d) of the Motor Carrier Act cannot be construed as establishing a statutory cause of action for enforcement of the duties therein imposed by private judicial actions for damages. The basis for this conclusion was that the Motor Carrier Act contains no provisions comparable to Sections 8 and 9 of Interstate Commerce Act, Part I and that in 1949 and again in 1957 the Congress refused to adopt proposed amendments which would have specifically authorized such private judicial actions. The Motor Carrier Act provisions considered in T.I.M.E., Inc. are the same as those that are here involved. Petitioner tacitly concedes that the reasoning of T.I.M.E., Inc. is here pertinent but contends the holding in T.I.M.E. is no longer controlling by reason of the later decision of this Court in Hewitt-Robins, Inc.

The position of the Petitioner is not well taken. In Hewitt-Robins, Inc. there was diversity. The basis of decision was that the complaint stated a claim predicated on a pre-existing common law right which survived passage of the Motor Carrier Act because it was not inconsistent with the purposes of the act within the meaning of Section 216(j) thereof. Thus, as the Court of Appeals stated, Hewitt-Robins considered only the question of survival of the common law right there involved. Nothing therein can be read as holding that the Motor Carrier Act created a statutory cause of action or as disapproving in any way the prior holding in T.I.M.E., Inc. that such statutory right does not exist. In short, the Court of Appeals has followed and correctly applied the applicable decisions of this Court in its holding that the District Court has no jurisdiction over the action asserted against the parties who are Respondents in Case No. 17235.

B. Comment of Respondent With Respect to the Contentions of the Petitioner That the Court of Appeals on Remand Has Decided Questions of Federal Law Which Have Not, but Should Be, Settled by This Court.

In Braswell Motor Freight, Inc., et al. v. Pensick & Gordon, Inc., October Term, 1963, No. 625, these Respondents who are parties to Case No. 17380 seek writ of certiorari on the basis, among others, that each of the following holdings of the Court of Appeals involve important questions of Federal law which have not been, but should be, settled by this Court:

1. The holding that the Amended Complaint states a common law cause of action which survives passage of the Motor Carrier Act;

2. The holding that jurisdiction of the District Court is not pre-empted by that of the National Labor Relations Board under the Labor Management Relations Act;

3. The holding that the District Court can determine to what extent, if any, the common law right has been affected or qualified by the Motor Carrier Act or the Labor Management Relations Act; and

4. The holding that the District Court can refer or require reference to the Interstate Commerce Commission or the National Labor Relations Board for such aid as may be necessary or useful to the Court's ultimate decision.

In the present posture of the case the Respondents who are parties to Case No. 17235 are not affected directly by any of the foregoing holdings of the Court of Appeals. Said Respondents are, however, in agreement with those in Case No. 17380 that each of said holdings presents an important question of Federal law which has not been, but should be, settled by this Court.

Understandably, the Petitioners do not challenge directly the holdings of the Court of Appeals that a common law action survives and that the jurisdiction of the District Court is not pre-empted by reason of provisions of the Labor Management Relations Act. However, arguments put forward by Petitioners in support of the necessity for review of other holdings confirm the position of Respondents that the holdings of the Court of Appeals as to the survival of the common law action and pre-emption under the Labor Management Relations Act must be included in the list of issues requiring review of this Court.

Petitioner concedes that the Motor Carrier Act and the Labor Management Relations Act are comprehensive regulatory enactments and that consistent and nondiscriminatory treatments of those affected thereby are fundamental aims of both statutes. Petitioner also recognizes, and rightly so, that the holdings of the Court of Appeals that a common law action survives passage of the Motor Carrier Act and that jurisdiction of the Federal Court over the controversy is not pre-empted by reason of the provisions of the Labor Management Relations Act will inevitably create a situation in which both State and Federal Courts will be undertaking to determine to what carrier conduct is to be considered discriminatory, what activities of employers and employees are protected or proscribed under the Labor Management Relations Act and the even more significant decisions involved in striking a balance between impacts of apparently conflicting Federal statutes on the surviving common law action.

Petitioner urges the foregoing difficulties can be minimized by a judicial declaration that Congress intended by enactment of the Motor Carrier Act to create a statutory cause of action for damages cognizable in the Federal district courts. The contention is tacit admission that survival of a common law action is inconsistent with statutory purposes. Respondent respectfully suggests that the complete and only logical solution to the difficulties which stem from perpetuation of the common law action, is the recognition that said common law action is necessarily inconsistent with the statutory purposes and does not, therefore, survive. Both solutions indicate the necessity for review by this Court of the holding of the Court of Appeals that a common law action survives enactment of the Motor Carrier Act and that the District Court has jurisdiction notwithstanding the provisions of the Labor Management Relations Act.

The Court of Appeals has suggested that the difficulties of coordinating apparently conflicting Federal statutes and the pre-existing common law rights can be resolved either by judicial decision or by piecemeal reference of issues either to the Interstate Commerce Commission or to the National Labor Relations Board, or both, as the Court may deem appropriate. Both the difficulties and the cumbersome and unprecedented solutions suggested by the Court of Appeals for overcoming them arise solely because the Court of Appeals has held a common law action survives passage of the Motor Carrier Act and that jurisdiction of the District Court is not pre-empted by National Labor Relations Board under the Labor Management Relations Act. All parties are in agreement that the specific solutions suggested by the Court of Appeals have no legal justification and that its holdings with respect thereto should be reviewed. All factors considered, it is apparent that such review must include re-evaluation of the validity of the holdings on the basic questions of survival of the common law action and pre-emption under the Labor Management Relations Act.

C. Conclusion.

Either directly or indirectly through arguments made in the petition, the Petitioner concedes that review of the decision of the Court of Appeals is required on all of the issues set forth in the petition for writ of certiorari heretofore filed by Respondents in Case No. 17380 in Braswell Motor Freight Lines, Inc., et al. v. Pensick & Gordon, Inc., No. 625, October Term, 1963. The only holding of the Court of Appeals not requiring review by this Court is the holding that the Motor Carrier Act does not create a statutory cause of action and that dismissal of the action as to the parties in Case No. 17235 was proper. All premises considered the writ should be granted in Case No. 17380 restricted to review of the holdings of the Court of Appeals on remand that—

(1) The Amended Complaint states a Cause of Action which survives enactment of the Motor Carrier Act;

(2) Jurisdiction of the District Court is Not preempted by that of the National Labor Relations Board under the Labor Management Relations Act;

(3) The District Court can determine to what extent, if any, the common law right has been affected or qualified by the Motor Carrier Act or the National Labor Relations Act; and

(4) The District Court can refer or require reference to the Interstate Commerce Commission or the National Labor Relations Board for such aid as may be necessary or useful to the Court's ultimate decision.

Procedurally, review so limited can best be accomplished by grant of the writ of certiorari as heretofore requested by certain of these Respondents in No. 625, October Term 1963.

Respectfully submitted,

CATLIN & CATLIN,
FRANK D. CATLIN,
GEORGE L. CATLIN,
Attorneys for Respondents,
Universal Carloading & Distributing Co., Inc.; Republic Carloading & Distributing Co., Inc.; National Carloading Corporation; Western Carloading Company; Acme Fast Freight, Inc.

RUSSELL & SCHUREMAN,
THEODORE W. RUSSELL,
Attorneys for Petitioners,
California Motor Express, Ltd.; Delta Lines, Inc; Desert Express; Merchants Express of California; Valley Motor Lines, Inc.; Western Truck Lines, Ltd.; Braswell Motor Freight Lines, Inc.; Denver-Chicago Trucking Co., Inc.; Hopper Truck Lines; Illinois-California Express, Inc.

APPENDIX A.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT

Part IV

Sec. 404(a) It shall be the duty of every freight forwarder to provide and furnish, upon reasonable request therefore, the service subject to this chapter covered by its permit issued under this chapter, and to establish, observe, and enforce just and reasonable rates and charges therefor and just and reasonable classifications, regulations, and practices relating thereto and to the issuance, form, and substance of receipts and bills of lading, the manner and method of presenting, marking, packing, and delivering property for transportation in service subject to this chapter, the facilities for such transportation, and all other matters relating to or connected with such transportation, and every unjust or unreasonable rate, charge, classification, regulation, or practice is prohibited and declared unlawful.

Sec. 404(b) It shall be unlawful for any freight forwarder, in service subject to this part, to make, give, or cause any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person, port, port district, gateway, transit point, locality, region, district, territory, or description of traffic in any respect whatsoever; or to subject any particular person, port, port district, gateway, transit point, locality, region, district, territory, or description of traffic to any unjust discrimination or any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever; Provided, That this subsection shall not be construed to apply to discriminations, prejudice, or disadvantage to the traffic of any carrier of whatever description.

LABOR MANAGEMENT RELATIONS ACT

(49 U. S. C. §§157, 158)

§157. Right of employees as to organization, collective bargaining, etc.

Employees shall have the right to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection, and shall also have the rignt to refrain from any or all of such activities except to the extent that such right may be affected by an agreement requiring membership in a labor organization as a condition of employment as authorized in section 158(a) (3) of this title.

§158. Unfair labor practices

(a) It shall be an unfair labor practice for an employer—

(1) to interfere with, restrain, or coerce employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in section 157 of this title;

(2) to dominate or interfere with the formation or administration of any labor organization or contribute financial or other support to it; PROVIDED, That subject to rules and regulations made and published by the Board pursuant to section 156 of this title, an employer shall not be prohibited from permitting employees to confer with him during working hours without loss of time or pay;

(3) by discrimination in regard to hire or tenure of employment or any term or condition of employment to encourage or discourage membership in any labor organization: PROVIDED, that, nothing in this subchapter, or in any other statute of the United States, shall preclude an employer from making an agreement with a labor organization (not established, maintained, or assisted by any action defined in this subsection as an unfair labor practice) to require as a condition of employment membership therein on or after the thirtieth day following the beginning of such employment or the effective date of such agreement, whichever is the later, (i) if such labor organization is the representative of the employees as provided in section 159(a) of this title, in the appropriate collective-bargaining unit covered by such agreement when made, and (ii) unless following an election held as provided in section 159 (e) of this title within one year preceding the effective date of such agreement, the Board shall have certified that at least a majority of the employees eligible to vote in such election have voted to rescind the authority of such labor organization to make such an agreement: PROVIDED FURTHER, That no employer shall justify any discrimination against an employee for nonmembership in a labor organization (A) if he has reasonable grounds for believing that such membership was not available to the employee on the same terms and conditions generally applicable to other members, or (B) if he has reasonable grounds for believing that membership was denied or terminated for reasons other than the failure of the employee to tender the periodic dues and the initiation fees uniformly required as a condition of acquiring or retaining membership;

(4) to discharge or otherwise discriminate against an employee because he has filed charges or given testimony under this subchapter;

(5) to refuse to bargain collectively with the representatives of his employees, subject to the provisions of section 159(a) of this title.

(b) It shall be an unfair labor practice for a labor organization or its agents—

(1) to restrain or coerce (A) employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in section 157 of this title: PROVIDED, That this paragraph shall not impair the right of a labor organization to prescribe its own rules with respect to the acquisition or retention of membership therein; or (B) an employer in the selection of his representatives for the purposes of collective bargaining or the adjustment of grievances;

(2) to cause or attempt to cause an employer to discriminate against an employee in violation of subsection (a) (3) of this section or to discriminate against an employee with respect to whom membership in such organization has been denied or terminated on some ground other than his failure to tender the periodic dues and the initiation fees uniformly required as a condition of acquiring or retaining membership;

(3) to refuse to bargain collectively with an employer, provided it is the representative of his employees subject to the provisions of section 159(a) of this title;

(4) (i) to engage in, or to induce or encourage any individual employed by any person engaged in commerce or in an industry affecting commerce to engage in, a strike or a refusal in the course of his employment to use, manufacture, process, transport, or otherwise handle or work on any good, articles, materials, or commodities or to perform any services; or (ii) to threaten, coerce, or restrain any person engaged in commerce or

in an industry affecting commerce, where in either case an object thereof is—

(A) forcing or requiring any employer or self-employed person to join any labor or employer organization or to enter into any agreement which is prohibited by subsection (e) of this section;

(B) forcing or requiring any person to cease using, selling, handling, transporting, or otherwise dealing in the products of any other producer, processor, or manufacturer, or to cease doing business with any other person, or forcing or requiring any other employer to recognize or bargain with a labor organization as the representative of his employees unless such labor organization has been certified as the representative of such employees under the provisions of section 159 of this title: Provided, That nothing contained in this clause (B) shall be construed to make unlawful, where not otherwise unlawful, any primary strike or primary picketing;

(C) forcing or requiring any employer to recognize or bargain with a particular labor organization as the representative of his employees if another labor organization has been certified as the representative of such employees under the provisions of section 159 of this title;

(D) forcing or requiring any employer to assign particular work to employees in a particular labor organization or in a particular trade, craft, or class rather than to employees in another labor organization or in another trade, craft, or class, unless such employer is failing to conform to an order or certification of the Board determining the bargaining representative for employees performing such work:

Provided, That nothing contained in this subsection shall be construed to make unlawful a refusal by any person to enter upon the premises of any employer (other than his own employer), if the employees of such employer are engaged in a strike ratified or approved by a representative of such employees whom such employer is required to recognize under this subchapter: Provided further, That for the purposes of this paragraph (4) only, nothing contained in such paragraph shall be construed to prohibit publicity, other than picketing, for the purpose of truthfully advising the public, including consumers and members of a labor organization, that a product or products are produced by an employer with whom the labor organization has a primary dispute and are distributed by another employer, as long as such publicity does not have an effect of inducing any individual employed by any person other than the primary employer in the course of his employment to refuse to pick up, deliver, or transport any goods, or not to perform any services, at the establishment of the employer engaged in such distribution;

(5) to require of employees covered by an agreement authorized under subsection (a) (3) of this section the payment, as a condition precedent to becoming a member of such organization, of a fee in an amount which the Board finds excessive or discriminatory under all the circumstances. In making such a finding, the Board shall consider, among other relevant factors, the practices and customs of labor organizations in the particular industry, and the wages currently paid to the employees affected;

(6) to cause or attempt to cause an employer to pay or deliver or agree to pay or deliver any money or other thing of value, in the nature of an exaction, for services which are not performed or not to be performed; and

(7) to picket or cause to be picketed, or threaten to picket or cause to be picketed, any employer where an object thereof is forcing or requiring an employer to recognize or bargain with a labor organization as the representative of his employees, or forcing or requiring the employees of an employer to accept or select such labor organization as their collective bargaining representative, unless such labor organization is currently certified as the representative of such employees:

(A) where the employer has lawfully recognized in accordance with this subchapter any other labor organization and a question concerning representation may not appropriately be raised under section 159(c) of this title,

(B) where within the preceding twelve months a valid election under section 159(c) of this title has been conducted, or

(C) where such picketing has been conducted without a petition under section 159(c) of this title being filed within a reasonable period of time not to exceed thirty days from the commencement of such picketing: Provided, That when such a petition has been filed the Board shall forthwith, without regard to the provisions of section 159(c)(1) of this title or the absence of a showing of a substantial interest on the part of the labor organization, direct an election in such unit as the Board finds to be appropriate and shall certify the results

thereof: Provided further, That nothing in this subparagraph (C) shall be construed to prohibit any picketing or other publicity for the purpose of truthfully advising the public (including consumers) that an employer does not employ members of, or have a contract with, a labor organization, unless an effect of such picketing is to induce any individual employed by any other person in the course of his employment, not to pick up, deliver, or transport any goods or not to perform any services.

Nothing in this paragraph (7) shall be construed to permit any act which would otherwise be an unfair labor practice under this subsection.

(c) The expressing of any views, argument, or opinion, or the dissemination thereof, whether in written, printed, graphic, or visual form, shall not constitute or be evidence of an unfair labor practice under any of the provisions of this subchapter, if such expression contains no threat of reprisal or force or promise of benefit.

(d) For the purposes of this section, to bargain collectively is the performance of the mutual obligation of the employer and the representative of the employees to meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith with respect to wages, hours, and other terms and conditions of employment, or the negotiation of an agreement, or any question arising thereunder, and the execution of a written contract incorporating any agreement reached if requested by either party, but such obligation does not compel either party to agree to a proposal or require the making of a concession: PROVIDED, That where there is in effect a collective bargaining contract covering employees in an industry affecting commerce, the duty to bargain collectively shall also mean that no party to such contract shall terminate or modify such contract, unless the party desiring such termination or modification—

(1) serves a written notice upon the other party to the contract of the proposed termination or modification sixty days prior to the expiration date thereof, or in the event such contract contains no expiration date, sixty days prior to the time it is proposed to make such termination or modification;

(2) offers to meet and confer with the other party for the purpose of negotiating a new contract or a contract containing the proposed modifications;

(3) notifies the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service within thirty days after such notice of the existence of a dispute, and simultaneously therewith notifies any State or Territorial agency established to mediate and conciliate disputes within the State or Territory where the dispute occurred, provided no agreement has been reached by that time; and

(4) continues in full force and effect, without resorting to strike or lock-out, all the terms and conditions of the existing contract for a period of sixty days after such notice is given or until the expiration date of such contract, whichever occurs later. The duties imposed upon employers, employees, and labor organizations by paragraphs (2)-(4) of this subsection shall become inapplicable upon an intervening certification of the Board, under which the labor organization or individual, which is a party to the contract, has been superseded as or ceased to be the representative of the employees subject to the provisions of section 159(a) of this title, and the duties so imposed shall not be construed as requiring either party to discuss or agree to any modification of the terms and conditions contained in a contract for a fixed period, if such modification is to become effective before such terms and conditions can be reopened under the provisions of the contract. Any employee who engages in a strike within the sixty-day period specified in this subsection shall lose his status as an employee of the employer engaged in the particular labor dispute, for the purposes of sections 158-160 of this title, but such loss of status for such employee shall terminate if and when he is reemployed by such employer.

(e) It shall be an unfair labor practice for any labor organization and any employer to enter into any contract or agreement, express or implied, whereby such employer ceases or refrains or agrees to cease or refrain from handling, using, selling, transporting or otherwise dealing in any of the products of any other employer, or to cease doing business with any other person, and any contract or agreement entered into heretofore or hereafter containing such an agreement shall be to such extent unenforcible and void: Provided, That nothing in this subsection shall apply to an agreement between a labor organization and an employer in the construction industry relating to the contracting or subcontracting of work to be done at the site of the construction, alteration, painting, or repair of a building, structure, or other work: Provided further, That for the purpose of this subsection and subsection (b)-(4)(B) of this section the terms "any employer," "any person engaged in commerce or an industry affecting commerce," and "any person" when used in relation to the terms "any other producer, processor, or manufacturer," "any other employer," or "any other person" shall not include persons in the relation of a jobber, manufacturer, contractor, or subcontractor working on the goods or premises of the jobber or manufacturer or performing parts of an integrated process of production in the apparel and clothing industry: Provided further, That nothing in this subchapter shall prohibit the enforcement of any agreement which is within the foregoing exception.

(f). It shall not be an unfair labor practice under subsections (a) and (b) of this section for an employer engaged primarily in the building and construction industry to make an agreement covering employees engaged (or who, upon their employment, will be engaged) in the building and construction industry with a labor organization of which building and construction employees are members (not established, maintained, or assisted by any action defined in subsection (a) of this section as an unfair labor practice) because (1) the majority status of such labor organization has not been established under the provisions of section 159 of this title prior to the making of such agreement, or (2) such agreement requires as a condition of employment, membership in such labor organization after the seventh day following the beginning of such employment or the effective date of the agreement, whichever is later, or (3) such agreement requires the employer to notify such labor organization of opportunities for employment with such employer, or gives such labor organization an opportunity to refer qualified applicants for such employment, or (4) shall agreement specifies minimum training or experience qualifications for employment or provides for priority in opportunities for employment based upon length of service with such employer, in the industry or in the particular geographical area: Provided, That nothing in this subsection shall set aside the final proviso to subsection (a)-(3) of this section: Provided further, That any agreement which would be invalid, but for clause (1) of this subsection, shall not be a bar to a petition filed pursuant to section 159(c) or 159(e) of this title.